Staanworth to get 3.5 acres of Minden parkland

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

Despite objections over price and a concern one councillor was absent, Minden council has decided to sell parkland to Staathworth.

The non-profit housing corporation plans to build a 32-unit seniors building across from its two present buildings. It asked council to sell the land at a low price, because this would free up more funds for the building itself.

The selling price of $50,000 was said to be too high by the corporation and too low by Deputy-reeve Bern Berry.

"We shouldn't get a great profit," said Reeve Ray Moore at last Thursday's meeting. "The land wasn't given to us to make a profit."

As well, Moore said, the proposed apartment building "is of more benefit than any other structure will be."

Berry was also concerned that Councillor Bob Sisson was not present for the vote, which was carried over from the last meeting when other objections were raised. These objections were dealt with in a contract presented at Thursday's meeting.

Out of courtesy to Sisson, who had expressed concern that more parkland was being sold for residential use, Berry thought the vote should be deferred.

However, all other councillors agreed with the price and felt the corporation needed to be able to get on with its plans.

"I want to see it done now," said Councillor Lewis Stevens in the debate whether to vote on the sale or defer it to the next meeting.

But what happens if "another good cause and another good cause" ask for pieces of the park, Councillor Mike Maher asked. The municipality is selling five acres to the county for its new offices, and Minden's CHACE Place Resource Centre would like to buy a much smaller chunk.

However, Maher said "I have no problems with the price" nor the concept, as long as residents in the other two buildings can benefit from dining and health facilities in the proposed building.

"I have nothing against a senior citizens development going there" but was against the process and price, Berry says.

In a recorded vote, Berry voted against the sale and Moore, Stevens and Maher voted for it.

By-law would help to create more housing

by BRIAN RODNICK
Staff Reporter

A proposed by-law amendment may soon create more affordable rental accommodation in Snowdon.

The amendment would allow an additional dwelling unit to be built inside an existing home. It would permit these "converted dwellings" to be constructed in both general residential and rural areas.

Assistant Clerk-treasurer Doug Brohm says two residents have requested to convert their homes.

"When we surveyed our zoning by-law we realized that we had no provision for this type of arrangement," he says.

No objections have been raised yet.

But Glamorgan Clerk-treasurer Elva Bates says that converting homes is a popular choice for people who want their parents to come live with them.

"When homes are built, only in later years when their children are gone do people realize that they have too much room," she says.

Glamorgan has had an amendment allowing converted dwellings in its zoning by-law since 1987. Seasonal dwellings, such as cottages, are excluded.

Monmouth also has a provision which allows converted dwellings in Hamlet Residential. Only homes that are at least 2150 square feet can be converted.

Other municipalities which allow converted dwellings include Dysart et al and Anson, Hindon and Minden. Both Lutterworth and Stanhope do not.

Snowdon Council will hold a public meeting on December 10th to discuss the amendment, and so far Brohm says no objections have been raised since a notice of the proposed amendment was put in the newspaper.

Minden rejects second county planner proposal

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

Minden council is not yet ready to require the assistance of a second county planner.

"We don't really need the service," Councillor Lewis Stevens told the county's new planner, Mark Stagg, at last Thursday's council meeting.

Stagg was asked to the meeting to discuss his proposal that the county hire a second planner to work with municipalities. If minor planning questions arose, the individual municipalities would pay a fee for the county planner's service, rather than consult a private planner. This way, a planner is available nearby.

Stagg said he made the proposal because the other municipalities he's worked in operated in a similar way.

"It's not pivotal to my two main priorities," said Stagg, referring to the drafting of the county's first Official Plan and his role as heading the economic strategy plan. "I am not trying to add another person to my staff..."

"The county as I see it is a family and it looks after its family."

"I think it would be an interesting situation," said Reeve Ray Moore, who agreed with the proposal. He said the planner's fees would be paid for by the developer and council would gain a liaison. "(The new planner) will have some understanding of what's going on in our community."

The county would have to pick up the planner's salary, Deputy-reeve Bern Berry said. The county would raise the money by levying the municipalities. "My feeling is that with the restructuring of the county and the new provincial government, and not knowing whether restructuring will take place (because it was an initiative of the former government), I think it's premature and we won't gain."

"If the county is going to look at development within the townships, are we inserting another step for the developer," Councillor Mike Maher asked.

The county would be on the review list when subdivision applications are submitted to the Ministry of Municipal Affairs, Stagg said. "But I'd hate the connotation that planners are always negative."

He added that when the idea was brought up by other councils in the county, "the feeling right now is 'No, we don't want it.'"

"I think we're adequately serviced by the present organization," said Stevens.

"I think it's commendable Mr. Stagg asks (if municipalities want the service)," said Maher. "If it speeds up the process, I'm in favour of it."

The decision whether to hire a second planner will be made by county council, Moore said.

Businesses feel pinch at pumps

by BRIAN RODNICK
Staff Reporter

As gas prices rise, area businesses and consumers may have to make some changes.

"I have had to raise my rates at least 15 per cent," says Chris Maskell, owner of Minden Taxi. "There is nothing else we can do."

But his business has picked up since the gas crunch began because many people are leaving their cars at home.

"Older people are not bothering to drive too much," says Hans Pripp of Han's Cab in Haliburton.

Pripp says he hasn't raised his prices because he was waiting to see what will happen to oil on the stock market. But Michael Ogle of Ogle's Haulage says the prognosis is not good.

"I will be surprised if the prices ever come down," Ogle says. He uses three trucks and past experience has proven that oil companies will keep prices at a maximum.

"It is the oil companies that are making all the decisions," says Ed Youngdale of Youngdale Fuel in Haliburton.

He says the crisis in the Gulf has had nothing to do with rising gas prices but that oil companies are just using it as an excuse to make money.

"The profits in the mid '80s were low for gas companies so they are trying to make up for it now," says Steve Roberts of Roberts-Austin Fuels in Haliburton.

"We take it at whatever price they say."

But Roberts says that business has not slowed down and consumers seem to understand why his prices have to go up. "People are expecting that prices will go up and they haven't been chewing us out about it."

An informal survey of some consumers who were filling up at the pumps seems to indicate a begrudging acceptance of the situation.

"It's pretty bad, but we need it no matter what the prices are like," says Robert Valm of Irondale who stopped in at Curry Motors.

"The government takes too big a share," says George Kennett of Gravenhurst. Kennett fills up his tank whenever it dips below half, and he doesn't intend to change his driving habits.

But changing driving habits is one way to avoid paying dearly at the pumps, says Karen O'Connor, owner of Stan's Texaco outside Haliburton.

"Rather than filling up two or three times a week, some of my customers are only coming in once," she says. "A lot of people are going to start driving smaller vehicles."

Since the crisis in the Persian Gulf started in August, gas prices have risen at least 10 cents a litre and now the majority of stations are selling it at 63.9 cents/litre. Oil market observers say that this price could rise at least another 10 cents by Christmas.

But some businesses have adopted a wait-and-see attitude.

"The full impact of the increase hasn't been gauged yet," says Jack Brohm of NorthernWays Transit.

Brohm says although his company does receive a certain amount of compensation from the Board of

In the wheelbarrow: Living a life of faith

by MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

BLONDIN, THE FAMOUS tight-rope walker, was about to do another death-defying stunt: walk across a rope stretched out over Niagara Falls, with a sack on his back and pushing a wheelbarrow in front of him.

The multitudes gathered along the shore. One little boy, admiration shining from his eyes, asked for an autograph.

"Do you know who I am?" the daredevil asked in return.

"Sure, you're the world-famous Blondin and you're going to cross Niagara Falls with a sack on your back and a wheelbarrow in front of you," the boy replied.

"Do you really believe I can do that?"

The boy nodded earnestly.

"Then you get into the wheelbarrow," Blondin told him.

"There's a way of believing academically, but are you willing to stake your life on something?" asks Bishop Desmond Hunt, his eyes sparkling when he assumes the role of story teller. "Do you have the commitment that the person who says they're going to do something, does it?"

"What we're talking about is the leap of faith and getting into the wheelbarrow, which doesn't mean leaving your brains at the door."

Such is the way Bishop Hunt has of making his point, even though the subject is quite a serious one. With apologies to the French, there's a joie de foi, a joy of faith about him. In imbibing in the word of God, his cup runneth over and others have no choice but to ask what he's drinking.

Hundreds of people drank in Bishop Hunt's words during "Hunting for Something," St. George's Anglican Church's community mission to celebrate its 125th Anniversary. Along with his wife Naomi, and Rev. Kim Beard, the retired Anglican bishop spent four days talking about faith and its place in society.

For forty minutes on the last day of the mission — their schedule was a hectic one — the three of them gathered at the church to talk about life in the wheelbarrow. As is wont to happen, following their path takes you in several directions.

The bishop, as usual, begins.

"My impression is everybody has some faith, something they put their trust in — if not God, it could be your energies, your skills, your profession."

"The question is Which one will hold you up and which will let you down?"

"You become like the things you worship, you begin to take on its characteristics," says Rev. Beard, who spent most of his time with the younger members of various congregations. If you have faith that possessions are the key to happiness, "sometimes it's easy to treat people like things."

The three put their faith in God and Jesus Christ. "A lot of people think of Jesus as a concept or historical figure," says Bishop Hunt. But through His teachings, Jesus was preparing the world for life without Him. "Blessed are those who believe who have not seen."

Some people argue that man invented God simply because he needed something to believe in. Bishop Hunt argues the opposite: "Whenever man has got the chance, he gets rid of God."

He remembers a conversation with two young men from India. He asked them what would happen if Jesus came to India, healing the sick, feeding the poor, blessing the multitudes.

"We'd kill him," the men replied. "We can't have God standing beside us — He makes us seem so shabby."

"Plato said the only thing that will affect the reaching of the highest good is someone should come to visit us who's a God but not a God. But, he said, we'll tear him apart," Bishop Hunt recounts of the early scholar's prophetic wisdom.

"Man basically wants to be his own God. . . We can either make God in our own image or we ask Him to make us in His."

"We have a very patient God who waits for us," Mrs. Hunt adds quietly. "He doesn't force us."

In a pluralistic society, many beliefs intermingle and must learn to get along. Reaction among some Christians is to turn towards fundamentalism as a defender of the faith. But its strictures often "make the mystery of faith a very two dimensional thing," says Bishop Hunt.

Anglicanism is having a great surge in Africa. As Rev. Beard says, the modern approach to spreading the faith is different than it was in years gone by. (The exhibit of missionaries' artifacts from Africa prompted an outcry among some members of the black community who said the exhibit demeaned their culture.)

"Sometimes missionaries have tried to introduce Western culture with the faith," Rev. Beard explains of the origins of many negative images of missionary work. "I think we've been learning. Today, there are more Anglicans in Nigeria than in England, United States and Canada combined. Most of them are black and women."

Rev. Beard can understand how the missionaries confused some aspects of Western culture with faith. Christianity imbues so many of our traditions, it's sometimes difficult to know where Christianity ends and tradition takes over.

"There's very little in Western culture that makes sense without an understanding of the Bible — art, music, economics, literature, our calendar. Many don't realize our heritage in Christianity."

Each is asked what role faith has played in their lives.

"To grow as a Christian and be able to face the world, I must first have trust and studying scriptures is very important — the foundation of my faith is there," says Naomi Hunt. When talking with those who have no faith, she says "I used to get mad, but now I feel sad."

Then it's her turn to tell a story. On a long air flight, she was sitting next to a man who was Chinese. They started to talk and she mentioned she was returning from a conference on evangelism. This led to thoughts about what Jesus meant to her.

The man was quiet; Mrs. Hunt thought he was

"Whenever man has got the chance, he gets rid of God," says Bishop Desmond Hunt, centre, who doesn't agree, obviously, with the argument that man has simply created God. He and his wife Naomi, left, and Rev. Kim Beard, right, were part of a four-day mission at St. George's Anglican Church.

embarrassed. Quietly, he said he didn't believe in God but that his sweetheart did and was praying for him. Then he said something which touched Mrs. Hunt's heart. "When I first found out you were a Christian, I felt uncomfortable," he said. "But you cared and were kind to me."

People won't listen to preaching, adds Bishop Hunt, but Christ talks through acts of such kindness and simple deeds. That's how faith is spread.

In a discussion about faith, it's impossible for the bishop not to quote scriptures and talk about relationships with a living Christ. Such talk makes many feel uncomfortable, and they fear he is out to convert them.

"Preaching is seen as a pejorative — 'Don't preach at me' — but I find if I open the scriptures and read a story and comment on how it touches our lives, people are strangely moved."

His faith began in childhood. "I was brought up in a Christian home and one of my earliest memories is of my mother taking my twin brother and me around the table for prayers."

Quietly, slowly, his mother's kind acts gave her sons the sense "of a confident love filled with faith. But what I had to become aware of is God has no grandchildren. I couldn't become a Christian on my parents' faith."

Easter and Christmas — that's when Rev. Beard was a Christian during his youth. Faith did not touch him until "I met a couple of Christians whose lives really had a quality of love and I couldn't put my finger on what was different. I started to read the New Testament. More and more, it was really speaking to my needs.

"At the time, I was asking myself 'Am I just a biological blob?' The answer 'Yes' wasn't very satisfying. The fact you have an ability to love spoke to me of something more."

"Why is it every culture has some sort of religious tradition," the young Anglican priest asks. "Whether Egyptian, Greek, Mayan, all turned their thoughts to the meaning of life and afterlife. It's not surprising then that our spirits seek to know God."

"There's a saying that there's a space within everyone which is in the shape of God," adds Bishop Hunt. God has to reveal himself, however. Otherwise, "we get rid of him because we think we don't need him."

At children's funerals, Rev. Beard says, "the last thing they want to hear is Jean Paul Sartre saying 'Sorry, your life has no meaning, goodbye.' There's something within us that says there must be more. We search for more love and meaning."

Mrs. Hunt says she had to search inside her own faith when it became evident one of her daughters would marry a Jamaican. It was all right to love your neighbour, but to marry him if he was Jamaican?

"I had a lot of negative stuff inside," she says, her smile telling you it's now gone. "The only way I settled it was through prayer."

"I don't think there's any colour in God's eyes," her husband says, adding that their faith "has transformed our home and marriage."

It's also made him into a rather jolly fellow. He

Drivers fear MTO is ignoring Dovers Hill

by BRIAN RODNICK

Icy conditions on Dovers Hill have caused problems for Haliburton drivers over the last two weeks. In response, drivers are blaming the Ministry of Transportation for not taking proper care of the steep descent into Haliburton Village.

Education to operate his school buses, it does not cover all his gas costs.

Like everybody else, Brohm expects that his company will feel the pinch, but that it is too soon tell.

"It won't be until the end of this month or so when we really notice a difference."

The gas in the pumps now was bought by the oil companies before the crisis in the Gulf. Only in the coming weeks will stations be using gas that was bought after the crisis broke out.

"There will be a definite impact, but I can't pin it down right at the moment," says Brohm. "Like everybody else, I'm hoping it will all go away."

snow has covered this portion of Highway 121. When cars tried to make it down the hill, they skid out of control because the road had not yet been sanded. At one point, Dovers Hill was closed for an hour last Wednesday to give work crews the chance to sand it.

The MTO is in charge of main highways, and their nearest work crews are based in Minden. Its Haliburton yard was shut down earlier this year because of cutbacks and a policy change, says Andy Mintz, a representative in the municipal section of the MTO in Huntsville. But he says cold weather always poses a problem.

"Sudden storms can hit and it takes time to get the crews out," he says.

Mintz also says that it can take at least an hour and a half for crews to get going and that it would cost tax payers too much money to have the crews on constant standby.

The MTO's Minden representative, Wayne Toye would not comment on the Dovers Hill situation and would not say if his office received any complaints.

He did say that any complaints about road conditions had to be handled by Lee Authier, the MTO's District Engineer in Huntsville. Authier could not be reached for comments.

Council hesitates to sell more park

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

It's a good idea, Minden council said, but CHACE Place's request to buy a piece of parkland to build a new resource centre comes at a bad time.

In any given month, 1500 parents, caregivers and children make their way to the presently cramped centre at the corner of South Water and Main Streets, said interim administrator Cheryl Cathcart in her presentation to council Thursday. That's an average of 65 person-visits a day in the 800 square-foot space.

More room is needed and after considering other options, such as renovating a house, Cathcart says her board would like to ask for provincial funds to build a centre no larger than 2000 sq. ft. This allows them to build according to needs and ministry guidelines.

Before applying for funds — and time is running out because the present lease expires in May 1991 —

CHACE must first have an idea of where it can build. Cathcart asked council to sell CHACE a 75' by 100' lot somewhere in the municipal parkland near the community centre. She also asked that the price be kept low since the Ministry of Community and Social Services pays 80 per cent of capital costs and fundraisers must garner the remaining 20 per cent.

"Because the Minden resource centre is so vital to the community, we feel it would be advantageous (for the municipality) to look at

Ride sets '91 sights for Fenelon Falls

by BRIAN RODNICK

The 1991 Ride for Sight will be held in Fenelon Falls.

The Ride committee had to look for a new site after Minden council decided not to host the fundraising motorcycle event at the Community Centre. Some councillors felt the grounds were too small to accommodate the 8,000 motorcyclists and were concerned about rowdy behaviour.

The Fenelon fairgrounds were chosen over two locations, the South Lake Tent and Trailer Park in Snowdon, and the Shannonville Speedway near Belleville.

The Ride will have use of the community centre and local service clubs will be asked to help provide food. It is a three-day event beginning June 7.

If you can find a 10 cent cup of coffee, buy it...

A dime doesn't buy much anymore. The ten cent cup of coffee disappeared along with ten cent chocolate bars and one dollar minimum wages. There may still be a few restaurants where you can buy a fresh cup of coffee for 60¢, but most charge 75¢ or more. Consider their expenses and you'll understand why.

The same is true of weekly newspapers. They are expensive to produce, and the costs of printing, wages, supplies, equipment, utilities, insurance, fuel and interest rates, keep rising every year. Like restaurants, or any other business, a weekly newspaper must cover its costs to survive.

The price of subscriptions and single copies of The Echo have not increased in three and a half years. Effective January 1st, 1991, the single copy price of the paper will rise by 15 cents, to 65 cents. The G.S.T. will add another nickel.

That may be hard to swallow at first, but we know you'll understand that we can't keep producing a paper to be proud of, if we don't keep up with costs. Most weeklies in Ontario already charge 75 cents a copy.

Reform Party speaks to people disillusioned by the old-guard power trio

by MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

BARRY DEVOLIN thinks he's not the only person who's disillusioned with the three political parties. But he wants to do something about it: as president of the newly-formed riding association for the Reform Party, he feels he's giving people a positive way to vent their frustrations.

"The incident that really galvanized my interest was the September provincial election," the Haliburton real estate sales representative says. "I felt many people did not vote for the NDP, but rather against the parties they traditionally voted for."

"When you have people electing governments for negative reasons, things happen that they never intended."

However unpopular the former Liberal provincial government, Devolin says "the depth of frustration and anger is trivial compared to what people think about (Prime Minister Brian) Mulroney."

The Reform Party's origins are in the West, where there is a strong call for a Triple E senate: elected, equitable among provinces effective. In recent elections, Alberta voters have chosen a Reform Party MPP — the party is only federal — and a senator, whom the prime minister later appointed as well.

Devolin feels there's a place for the party in Ontario as well. When he phoned the Alberta office for information, "at that point I was just looking for alternatives." The more he learned, the more he became convinced the party was on the right track.

This feeling was reinforced when he met party leader Preston Manning at a recent gathering in Orillia, where Devolin signed his membership papers. "I've heard a lot of political speakers and he's very good," Devolin says of the son of Ernest Manning, Alberta's premier from 1943 to 1968. "He's not fire and brimstone. He's intelligent and articulate and I think people trust him."

Because Preston Manning was raised with politics, Devolin believes he has a good sense of how the system works. Many politicians say "When I get elected I'm going to do this and that." Promises soon fade into reality.

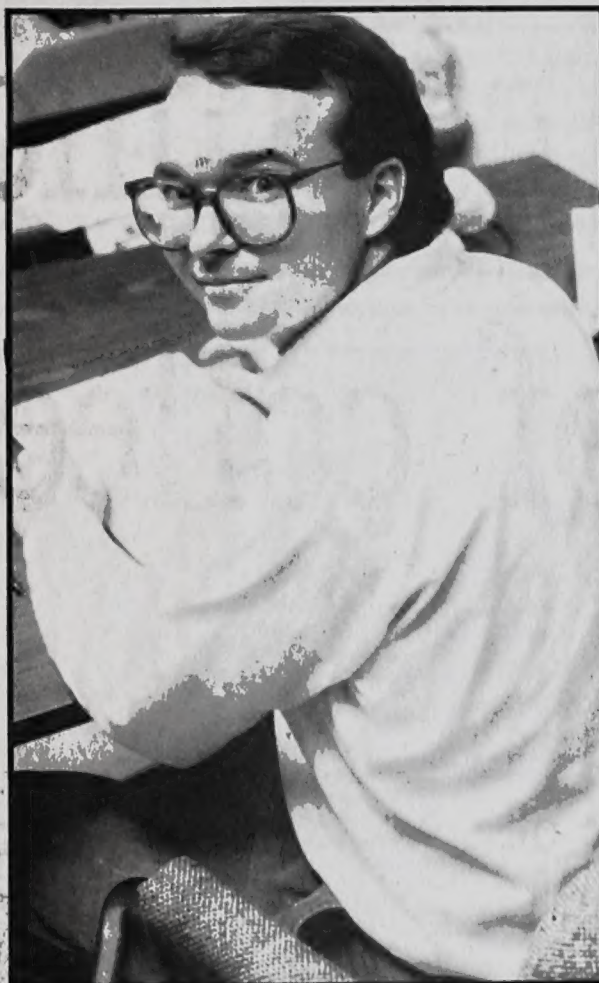

"Preston realizes the constraints of power, that you can't always do what you want to do," Devolin says.

What does the Reform Party want to do?

"They advocate a handful of fundamental reforms that will make it easier to reflect the wishes of the electorate," Devolin says, citing the Triple E senate as one. Our present government is based on a 19th Century British model "and I don't think it reflects today's reality. We're moving towards the year 2000."

As well, the Reform Party stresses "a Member of Parliament's primary obligation is to his or her constituents, not their party." With the present parties, MPs cannot break ranks with their leaders, even though most people might be against certain policies, such as the proposed Goods and Services Tax.

Does this mean decisions will be made by plebiscites, with polls taken of the constituents' wishes. "It would be impossible for members to know the exact break down" of what the constituents feel on any given matter, Devolin says. However, the MP is closer to the grassroots than a cabinet member.

Asked whether this will mean an increase in lobby groups as people try to promote their views, Devolin says "sometimes democracy is very messy." When people make their feelings known, there are bound to be disagreements. But that doesn't make disagreements bad.

Allowing people some measure of say is a practical approach, he says. "What we have is a hybrid (between extremes) in representative democracy."

But if the majority rules, he's asked, what's to protect those who find themselves in the minority? Should people be forced to live by "the majority's" wishes?

"Somehow you're implying your decision is right and correct and the majority's is wrong," Devolin says in response. In protecting the rights of all, "that's where leadership comes in."

However, the Reform Party does not want to focus on such visceral issues as abortion and capital punishment, since both are "destructive politically" and socially.

The Party's main concern is fiscal responsibility, he says, and that takes in a broad spectrum of other issues, including immigration and official bilingualism.

With all policies "there should be a component of economic responsibility." But that too should be tempered with a respect for the people's wishes. The GST is unpopular even with long-time and fiscal conservatives and should not go ahead.

"I think we need tax reform that recognizes our economy is increasingly service oriented but this is a bad choice," Devolin, a long-time conservative, says. He compares the government's way of dealing with a massive debt and deficit to an alcoholic

"I think we need tax reform that recognizes our economy is increasingly service oriented but the GST is a bad choice."

who can't afford booze: give him a raise (the GST) so he can start buying it again. Monies need to be raised, but "we need to get expenditures under control and establish credibility with the people."

"I think the vast majority of Canadians know we have a fiscal problem." But if the GST raises revenues, "they have absolutely no faith the money will be spent well. If you can gain their faith, that will be a major part of the battle."

Credibility is a key word, especially since Mulroney has none of it. Even if he told Canadians he'd do something, few would believe him.

"I don't hate Brian Mulroney, I feel compassion for the man," says Devolin, who in the 1987 provincial election was the PC candidate's campaign manager. "It's a big job and he's had a rough ride. Until recently, I thought it was possible for him to pull (problems) back out of the fire."

One issue Mulroney's been criticized about is the Meech Lake Accord and relations with Quebec. The Reform Party would like to revoke the Official Languages Act because, Devolin says, bilingualism was forced on people against their wishes.

"The whole notion that Canada has two founding nations is faulty and irrelevant," says Devolin. "All Canadians should be treated equally" and we should get away from "hyphenated Canadians" — French-Canadian, Chinese-Canadian — and just be Canadians. Some areas merit services in French, and the federal government should be bilingual, but English explains it this way: "If you're not burdened with anxiety and resentment, it will do something to your sense of the future and today."

Rev. Beard, whose wife and baby daughter were not able to come, says his faith has taken him on many paths he otherwise would not have followed. Becoming a priest is most evident, but there were also his years working in Africa with CUSO, his trek across the Sahara and his present work in Belize. "I decided it was important to use my gifts to help others."

That desire to reach out to others was certainly appreciated by the hundreds who, in one way or another, took part in the mission. It brought people from all local congregations together, allowing them to meet each other as well the three visitors.

"We're impressed with the community spirit," says Bishop Hunt. "There was a lot of concern and compassion here before we arrived."

After their visit, there's bound to be a lot more.

Think, then buy

Imagine a town without a downtown, a ghost town of empty stores and eerie silence, a town without the hustle and bustle of commerce. Imagine a place where you couldn't buy a pair of gloves to warm your hands or a book to warm your soul. Think what it would be like to have to drive fifty miles, seventy five miles, every time you needed, or wanted, some little thing — a package of screws or a bouquet of flowers, a toy for a child's birthday or a new pair of socks. Like most people, you'd think twice about living in a place with no stores or services, just as you'd be uneasy in a town without doctors.

And yet each year, especially at Christmas, a great many local people head for the shopping malls of Lindsay, Peterborough, Oshawa and Toronto to spend dollars they've earned in Haliburton County, with retailers who wouldn't know Haliburton from Haileybury. The phenomenon is known as retail drift, and it can cut the commercial heart out of a small community. If you don't believe it, consider the case of Cornwall, a community much bigger than Haliburton or Minden, but a community that's being hurt by the shopping habits of its own residents. In recent weeks, Cornwall retailers have been forced to lay off 135 employees because they can't afford to pay them. And the merchants aren't blaming the recession. Instead, they say the layoffs are the result of Cornwall residents spending their dollars elsewhere, particularly in the United States.

The lure of the States is not much of factor in the spending habits of Haliburton County residents, of course. When they choose to shop outside the county, it's because they're drawn to the glitter and variety of bigger downtowns, and the perception that things might be cheaper elsewhere.

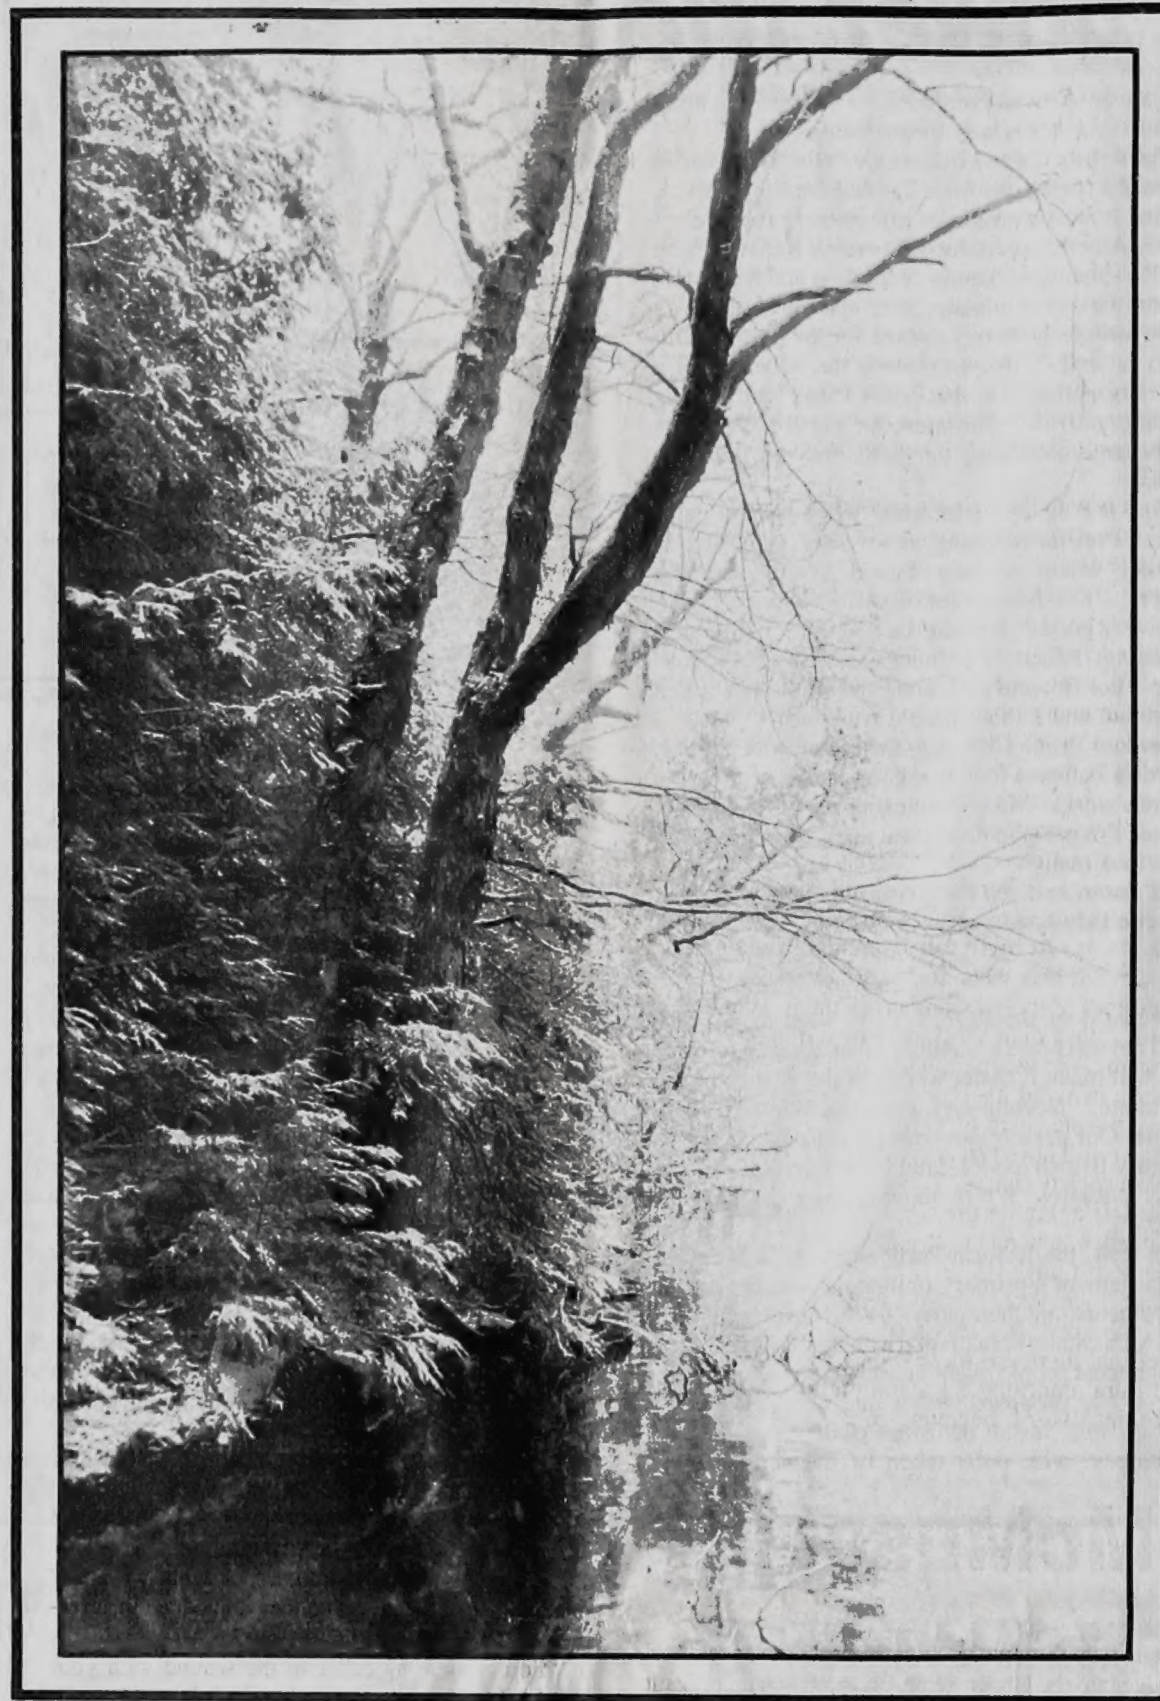

On the issue of variety, and variety alone, main street merchants have a hard time competing. If you want to fight the crowds through 50 clothing stores in a 100-store mall in search of a sweater, you'll have to head for a city. But on every other count, local merchants are competitive. They have to be, or they wouldn't survive.

It would be a mistake to take the health of the downtown business community for granted — to think that the dollars you spend outside of town won't make a difference to the kind of community you live in. Every dollar that's earned locally and spent elsewhere hurts the local economy. On the other hand, when dollars earned here are spent here, they continue to flow through the community, enabling new jobs to be created, new services to be offered, and ensuring that main street doesn't become a bleak and empty street.

To be brutally frank, these are not good times in the retail business. Many local merchants are suffering the effects of high interest rates, a downturn in the tourist industry, and the erosion of consumer confidence. Some have had to cut back on staff, and as the recession is compounded by the imposition of the GST in January, many will find it even harder to keep their doors open. In that kind of economic climate, it's more important than ever that every local resident makes an effort to shop locally.

There are many misconceptions among Canadians about what it means to be in business. It may mean a little more freedom to shape one's own destiny than people who work for others have, but it does not mean instant wealth, and it certainly does not mean security. On the contrary, people who own their own businesses are haunted by the fear of failure, concerned about the financial well being of their employees, and often hurt by the criticism of people whose hearts are ungenerous. It is no easy task to build a solid business in a small community, but we should be grateful that so many people are willing to try.

Local merchants are the backbone of the community. They are its public face, its principal supporters, and among its most generous and hardworking citizens. None of them asks for charity, but all of them welcome the chance to serve you. Think of them before you shop elsewhere. Both you, and they, have a lot to lose if the recession is made worse by shopping out of town. L.P.

Concerned over wetlands

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

OUR READERS WRITE...

To the Editor:

Three Lake Kashagawigamog Organization executive members attended a public meeting recently concerning Dysart updating its Official Plan. I expressed concern that no provisions are in place to protect the few remaining wetland areas on the Lake Kashagawigamog chain. According to the planner, the lands designated "conservation" are merely "difficult to build on." There is no long-term plan (through zoning by-laws) to protect wetlands anywhere in the municipality in spite of strong recommendations from Ministry of Natural Resources to do so.

I have read a document provided to Dysart over two years ago in which MNR suggests appropriate wording for policy statements, land use guidelines and actual zoning by-laws pertaining to wetland protection. To date, these well-reasoned and timely recommendations are conspicuously absent from the Official Plan.

Wetlands not only provide valuable habitat and nesting areas for fish, birds and other wildlife but they also maintain and improve water quality, help control flooding, and contribute substantial social, aesthetic, and economic benefits through recreational and tourism-related activities. Without proper zoning, wetlands will continue to be filled in, dredged out, or built upon until the life is squeezed out of them.

MNR has developed a comprehensive and objective method for identifying and classifying wetlands according to a Provincial Evaluation System. Dysart (and/or Haliburton County) could use this system to determine which wetlands in the municipality (and/or county) are most significant and thus most worthy of protection. It is not too late to take this important first step towards saving at least some of the remaining wetlands under our stewardship.

Talk of Depression is back

To the Editor:

For those of us who remember the great Depression vividly, the present mood of the media, and of those of us who have both material possessions and wealth to protect, seem to eerily reflect the same refrain of those terrible years. Then there were no trade unions, social welfare, or child and single parent allowances to blame. Indeed it was the cupidity, venality and corruption of the moneyed classes that precipitated that human-destroying cataclysm.

Yet, then as now, those who had jobs blamed the poor, the unemployed and the immigrants for the whole thing. Anti-Semitism and the K.K.K. were in vogue. When starving people protested in marches, they were called Communists and beaten up by the police. The motor that fueled the economy before the crash was greed and the lack of laws to prevent naked exploitation.

To-day the same greed and right-wing philosophy is on the way to precipitating another Depression. With that swing to neo-fascism, we find all the old shibboleths of the past being repeated.

There exists, again, anti-Semitism, particularly in the States, a back-lash directed against foreigners and immigrants, and finally, the old tired complaints that relate the failure of the free market economy to unemployment insurance, welfare, child support payments, etc. Again no-one wants to face facts or history. The government has spent at least 20 times as much money on gifts to industry that are seldom repaid than to supporting the welfare network.

Poll after poll has shown that the number of chronically unemployed are less than 5 percent of the total. Immigration, far from taking jobs away from native-born Canadians, produces more work opportunities for everyone.

The only sad if ironic, conclusion that the moneyed class ever express is to blame all our financial woes on "Socialism". The humorous side of that sick argument is, that only under Democratic Socialism have any of these chronic problems been solved. Under the banner of Free Enterprise, we have destroyed our forests, polluted our air and water, filled our cities with homeless and hungry people,

SOME BUSINESS PLACES here in Haliburton County are struggling to make ends meet now that we are right into the recession. Some unfortunately will be forced to close up shop and this is something that we just hate to see. If you drive into any village, town or city and see vacant stores it seems to give that particular place a bad eye. This is why more than ever local business people in the community will be fed up with every Tom, Dick and Harry coming into their place of business soliciting money or prizes for their club, organization, association or what have you, and I don't blame them. How long can these same people stay in business if they are going to be hounded day in and day out for money to support this or to support that? On a poor business day a merchant could give more money away than they have in the cash register at the end of the day. How much longer is this going to go on before the business people start telling these people who are soliciting money or prizes to go back home and try to come up with some ideas on how to raise money in some other way? It might be a good idea of the BIA would consider making a list of what organizations they will be donating to and what others they will be turning down. Some people are of the opinion that just because you are in business it means that you are loaded. Don't believe a word of it. There must be other ways to raise money in the community instead of constantly asking the business people for a handout.

Remembrance Day this year once again reminds us that we are free to live in a democracy because of the men who fought and laid down their lives in two wars. With all the problems that we face here in Canada at the present time we should be counting our blessings as Canadians. We can still go and worship at the church of our choice, no one is taking hostages. We have food banks looking after those in need, we have a good health program and I could go on and on. Many people are depressed these days with higher taxes, threat of war in the Middle East, a recession and many people out of work. We can't sit back and give up, we must carry on with our everyday work as though everything is in order. I know that if you are out of work and your family has hardly enough to eat it's very hard not to be down and discouraged. But through it all just think how lucky we are to be living in a place like Canada. It's time that we as Canadians started to wave the flag and sing our national anthem as loud as we can. We have a great deal to be thankful for.

A week ago Tuesday morning, following a freezing rain storm that made the highways look more like a skating rink, motorists found driving very hazardous on Dover's Hill at Haliburton. It was impossible for some people to get down, others went off the road and there were many more near accidents. When is the M.T.O. going to smarten up and start to put salt and sand on this very dangerous hill immediately after the rain or snow starts to fall? Vehicles waited and waited on this particular morning until finally they decided to come along with some salt.

Ready to catch the torch

THROUGH THE PERISCOPE

MARTHA PERKINS

THE NUMBERS WERE DOWN at this year's Remembrance Day service, both among the veterans gathered row on row on the main street, and the people in civilian clothes who stood with them, back a distance.

For the veterans, this is to be sadly expected. The war — funny how we call it "the" war, assuming everyone will understand which of the dozens we're talking about, even though many are still being fought today — ended 45 years ago. Given that many of the men were 20 to 25 when it started, age will naturally do the job bullets and bombs couldn't.

As far as I know, there is only one World War I vet still alive in the county, Jack Henderson at Ex-tendicare. In some ways, we don't want to remember the war many of Mr. Henderson's school chums gave their lives to. More lost their lives to the abject living conditions than to enemy fire. Man's inhumanity to man was clearly illustrated in the haze of mustard gas, and men had to be sent back to the trenches time and time again because there was no one else to replace the dead.

Come the year 2000, many of the World War II vets will be as old as Mr. Henderson. Who will the people stand in solidarity with as the trumpeter plays Last Post? In my grandfather's home town, trumpeting the call to silence was always his job. He was too young to fight in World War I, just as my father was too young to fight in World War II. My mother was a WREN, yet never left Halifax.

For someone who has never lost a close family member to war, I am oddly sentimental about Remembrance Day. I go to the services even if I'm not working; I think it's the least I could do to pay tribute to those who did so much more.

This feeling isn't shared by a young university student who wrote a column in Friday's Globe and Mail. "For many young people, Remembrance Day has become a meaningless ritual. Unable to relate to something that has not touched their lives, a generation disregards what should be a day of reflection and insight."

He first lays blame on a culture obsessed with individual rights and freedoms, the citizens' sense of outrage deadened by constant scenes of televised violence. I'd say it in a different way, and then I'd tone it down. We have a society which to a large measure (and this is an over-simplification) doesn't believe in anything that can't be measured in dollars and cents. Sense of worth is measured by how much money we earn; sense of success is measured by possessions.

But then I wonder — this is the toning-it-down part — whether this is because we do not believe in our society. How can young people have a set of beliefs if we don't believe in them, and tell them so at every moment? "Young people today just aren't. . ."

But it is with the writer's second source of blame that I have strong disagreements. He says Remembrance Day glorifies destruction and waste "in a sort of jingoistic eulogy, perpetuating the biggest lie of this century: that it is right and honourable to die for your country. . . Remembrance Day must change if we are ever going to live in a society that does not value and perpetuate the ideals of war."

Ideals of war? I've never heard a veteran speak of ideals of war. But I've heard a lot about the ideals of peace, and justice, and compassion for your fellow man. Why were thousands of Canadians willing to die in a strange country? I talked to Bob Giuliano after Saturday's service. He said they joined up because they had to. Their sense of "right" made them do it. At first they weren't "fighting for Canada." It was when they were overseas the full importance of their actions struck them. When they returned, they didn't feel like pawns of nationalistic jingoism. War was hell, and they tell you so. They also say to avoid it — but not at all costs, as many young people seem to value.

Do we still have that sense of right? Are there any ideals a society shares? Today we are so concerned about infringing on the rights of others, we try to avoid talk of inherent truths. Many therefore assume there aren't any.

That, I suppose, is why I will continue to go to Remembrance Day services. I am honouring the belief that there are some things worth dying for. And I am mourning a generation that struggles to find things worth believing in.

Lucky, unlucky at same time

DOWN OUR ROAD

SHARON LYNCH

"WE GOT SKUNKED," he announced, opening the cabin door and motioning Lou in. The other men were sitting around the big table, there expressions ranging from puzzled to depressed. They had just finished supper and Bobby was doing up the dishes.

"Skunked? What are you talking about? The Wilson gang got six this week and the others did well, too. What kind of hunters are you?" asked Lou, who never could resist teasing.

"We're discouraged hunters, is what we are," piped in one of the guys and they all nodded in agreement.

"You're rubbing salt into the wound with your words, Lou," stated their leader Jake, only half-seriously. "We saw five deer but could never get close enough. I fired at one even though I knew I was too far away, that's how frustrated I was getting."

It was the end of the first week in deer season and the ten men were leaving the next day. Some of them had taken a week's holidays while others only a couple of days, joining the rest at camp mid-week. Every morning they rose early, trudged over snowy hills, down into valleys, across ridges and through dense bush. And at the end of their time, they had nothing to show for it. Well, that wasn't entirely true.

"Look at these pictures, Lou. Not bad, eh?" Jake pushed a pile of snapshots towards their guest while the others watched his reaction. There was Bobby sitting in the outhouse reading a newspaper; Jake clowning around in his underwear; someone else wearing a Hallowe'en wig; all showing grown men acting foolish and having a heck of a good time while they did so. There were also photos from other years. In one the snow was so thick on the trees it looked like a Christmas card. Another showed them standing on the beach in their shirt sleeves, squinting into the sun. And yet another, taken the year before, had them in rain ponchos surrounded by a grey, wet world.

The last photo was taken outside the cabin. It was a typical late fall day and the bunch of them were lined up or hunched down on one knee, rifles in hand, smiling one and all. It was a great picture.

"This one's yours," Jake told him, handing over the group shot. "We all have one and had an extra print made for you." Lou took it with thanks and put it into his jacket pocket so it wouldn't get lost before he got home.

He looked around the table at the men. They ranged in age from mid-twenties to Jake's father-in-law, who had to be in his late fifties. In fact, as Jake had pointed out on another visit, they were all related, either through blood or marriage. They had been hunting together, with the exception of the youngest, for twelve years and the bond between them was strong.

Considering they had just spent seven days hunting, eating, sleeping and playing cards together, you would think they'd have gotten on each other's nerves by the end of the week. Coupled with the frustrating lack of success at bagging any game, tempers could be expected to be short, irritability having set in. But not this group.

They had eaten well all week, thanks to their wives who each provided a huge meal for ten hungry mouths. The cabin was spacious and comfortable, so they had a good place to which to return after each fruitless day in the bush. And they knew each other well enough to know when to give someone a little space, who took kidding the best and what topics were best avoided.

While they relished the week for the hundredth time — where they had seen the deer, who was standing in what place, how they had tracked it (for they did not use dogs) — their visitor watched their faces. One would shake his head in disbelief at their bad luck; another would chuckle at a remembered incident; still another would interject about what they might do differently next year. Cigarette smoke hung in the air and the last whiff of cabbage rolls still lingered by the stove. Playing cards were neatly piled in the middle of the table where they had made room for supper. But something was different and Lou took another look at Jake.

Sure enough, he was as spiffed-up as though he was going to church and there was just the slightest hint of aftershave about him. Looking around, Lou noticed that several other faces were equally presentable.

Bobby, having finished the dishes, joined them at the table. "Well," said Bobby, "Maybe we didn't get any deer, but we sure had a good time, didn't we boys?" They all agreed. "We had some time off work and out of the city, got to see some beautiful country, not to mention the animals big and small, and for a few days we could forget about the rest of the world. I think we're pretty lucky at that."

"That's right," added Jake. "We're not really complaining. And tonight we're going out to the hotel and party because tomorrow it's back to the real world again."

ON THE ROAD — The first time our family camped in Illinois, we figure, must have been in 1958. We were towing our first trailer, adapted from an old bread wagon and some Coke signs, with a set of 16-inch pre-war Dodge Wheels, towed by our third car, a '52 bustleback Pontiac coupe. (Wish I still owned the car — it'd be a valuable collector's item now).

We had taken the five kids and the dog (as always)

Everyone could use this friend

AS OTHERS SEE IT

BOB GIULIANO

WHEN IT SEEMS that others are really down on you, it's important to celebrate friends who are not. Down the road from our place lives a guy I can always count on, not only to help out when I'm in a mess around the cottage, but to keep on being friends by telling me the truth.

Lately he said "Folks have really been after you these days!" A bit of laughter follows. Then, "It's probably good for you. Keeps you in your place. You don't get too important that way!" Laughter again follows. Then, "My wife does that for me!" More laughter. That's Bruce.

Bruce reads all my columns faithfully, whether he likes them or not. Sometimes he finds them much too long, says he falls asleep, but reads it all between snoozes no matter how long it takes. Now that's loyalty, eh?

Bruce makes no bones about it: Short columns are the best. So in honour of a good friend who reads faithfully the stuff of my mind and heart, here is the shortest column yet. So thanks from all of you readers who wish for shorter columns is due to Bruce Malott, good neighbour and friend to many along our road.

on a trip up through Michigan, across the Mackinaw Bridge into the Upper Peninsula, and then up to Sault Ste. Marie, Ontario, where my folks were then living. After a visit with them, we'd continued down around the far side of Lake Michigan through Chicago and Indiana, then back home by way of Detroit.

It was on that trip, in Bay City, Michigan that we first discovered McDonald's. Now, you immediately have a picture in your mind — but you're wrong. Because it didn't look anything like you're thinking.

The building was garish in red and white stripes, with two wickets in the glassed-in front — no inside seating. You walked up to one window and placed your order, then went across to the other one and picked it up.

The employees inside wore classic white drive-in uniforms and caps, and some of them were sitting by a bag of potatoes, peeling them and slicing them into chip-type slices. The sign featured a cartoonish character called Speedee, and the yellow arches were made to look as if they were actually holding up the ends of the building.

My oldest son, who was seven — and husky even then — can still remember me saying he could have as many hamburgers as he wanted, because that had never happened to him before. Of course, it was the first time I'd even seen hamburgers for just 15 cents! Cheeseburgers and milk shakes were just 19 cents, and fries just a dime! These were the only items on the menu, but for somebody with a carload of hungry kids, it was a real find — and we stopped at a lot of McDonalds in our family travels over the years.

Of course, there weren't any of them in Canada until perhaps the early sixties. As I recall, the first ones were opened in London, Ontario about the time we were moving to Toronto. And they were the new design — the kind you see these days, with inside seating — and higher prices.

I'm still a fan of McDonald's, although I must admit I get a lot of kidding about it. It seems to me that it is a lot like watching television — everybody does it, but no one wants to admit it. Not a classy thing to do, old boy . . .

Because I'm still a fan, one of the places I decided I would visit on our way out West was Des Plaines, Illinois. That's where Ray Kroc opened his first location. He's the guy behind the chain as it is known today — undoubtedly the most successful franchise in history.

Kroc himself wasn't the most successful guy around until he was 52. He was just a high school dropout who'd become a salesman for a milkshake mixer company in California. That's when he went to look at the Speedee Service System that the McDonald brothers ran out there.

He was intrigued when the brothers ordered eight of the machines he was selling, and went to see what they were doing with them. He discovered they had eight of these self-serve restaurants with no seating. You either ate at home or in your car.

In an age of two-car families and people on the move, Kroc saw this as the future of what was to

NORTHERN LIGHTS

VIRGINIA MUENZEL

WHEN I TOLD friends who asked where we were spending our long weekend, they were a bit taken aback to hear we were on our way to Wasaga Beach.

"In November?" someone asked.

"Well, we'd never do there in July. There's too many people."

We seem to be acquiring a reputation for off-beat vacations. But, then, that's what you get when your travelling companions own a lodge.

But off-season holidays have their advantages. For instance, how likely are you to see a snowy owl on a beach teeming with people? So we weren't wearing the normal beach attire. At least we didn't have to worry about sunburn. We had a marvelously brisk, nose-nipping walk up and down the beach without having to hop-scoot blankets and sand buckets; with the roar of the breakers and mist-carrying winds in our ears.

None of the lifts were operating when we toured the ski hills either. But the view was spectacular all the same. We drove all through the back mountain roads and walked through exciting places like Walter's Falls and Creemore. We never had to stand in line at the Wicked Wick candle factory, Blue Mountain Pottery, or even the Candy Factory.

Best of all, because the "tourist traps" were all boarded up for the season, we saved a heck of a lot of money. In the places that were open, the staff were reasonably attentive. After all, they didn't have a whole lot to do.

If there has to be a down side to our fall adventure, it would be trying to beat the first major snowstorm home and discovering, half way there that that's where it was coming from.

Redmen take their loss of title in snowy stride

Two things were obvious by the time the final whistle blew in the Kawartha Junior Football championship last Wednesday: Haliburton's Redmen were a very good football team, but Crestwood was even better.

The HHSS Juniors headed for Peterborough with the confidence gained in an undefeated season. They knew the game would not be a walkover, since Crestwood had dominated the other Peterborough area teams, but neither the Haliburton players nor head coach Gary Brohman would have predicted that the Redmen would not score a point in 60 minutes.

"They out defended us" coach Brohman said of Crestwood's impressive play in the title game. The Peterborough team scored a touchdown in each quarter, and ended up winning 27-0.

The Junior Redmen's best chance to score came late in the first half. They marched the ball down field and were within one yard of the goal line when

Team opens season with big win

It couldn't be described as classic hockey. Calling it a rout would be closer to the mark. But elegance doesn't count in the point standings, only wins, and that's what the Haliburton Redmen hockey team got last Tuesday when they opened their season at home against Clark high school from Newcastle. A total of 18 goals were scored, and 17 of them were netted by the Redmen.

Coach Ron Yake was pleased with his team's win, but quick to point out that it isn't a sign of things to come in the 19 game regular season. Clark is just getting its hockey programme underway, and is not expected to be competitive, at least in the early going. The real test of the Redmen's strength will come this week, with a road game against Campbellford on Tuesday and a home game Wednesday evening against St. Peters, teams which have provided solid competition in previous seasons.

The Redmen have 19 players out to practice, including a core of veterans now in their second or third season. They include Shaun Perrin, Phillip Johnston, Ray Cook, Jamie Dollo, John Vuksic, Wyatt Nesbitt, Jason Billings and Kyle Hewitt.

Billy Smith will be back in the nets for the Redmen, and he's expected to do well, having gained a lot of experience between the pipes last year for the Redmen.

"Overall, we've got an older team, with a lot of veteran players" said coach Yake. "We should be competitive all year, and I think we have a chance of doing quite well."

Season passes for all of the Redmen home games are available. They can be purchased by contacting vice principal Gary Brohman.

With the arrival of the Ontario Health Tax, the GST just around the corner, a possible recession on the horizon, and who knows what new rules and regulations coming at us in the future, it has become increasingly difficult to stay on top of things.

If you cannot afford to hire another bookkeeper just to keep our friends in Queen's Park and Ottawa satisfied, and the thought of those extra hours wading through red tape is enough to spoil your sunniest day, we at Halco may have a solution. Now more than ever, it makes sense to automate - computerize - your business. Prices have never been lower, computers have never been friendlier.

If you decide to buy, you can now write off any business system used to collect GST in one year. On the other hand leases are available for under $100 per month. Eligible participants may also receive 80% subsidies on approved training programs.

Please give us a call at 457-1590 for details. I'd be happy to drop over and show you how to fight the red tape blues.

Lost game doesn't tarnish Redmen's gridiron success

time ran out.

Looking back on an undefeated season, coach Brohman thinks his team was hampered by their own success. Lacking the opportunity to be tested by a team of their own calibre until they ran up against Crestwood, the Junior Redmen could not react effectively to Crestwood's style of play.

While last Thursday's loss was a disappointment, it did not tarnish the lustre of the Junior Redmen's outstanding season. They were the class of their division, and earned the Kawartha West championship unchanged.

Snow hampers Seniors

The Senior Redmen had less reason to be optimistic as they practised in sub freezing temperatures and snow last week for their Kawartha championship match against Crestwood. The Peterborough team's reputation was daunting. Not only were they undefeated all season, but they had defeated one of the two top high school football teams in Metro Toronto. Their defense was strong, and their offense was led by an outstanding quarterback and a 200 pound running back who has been offered football scholarships to three top American universities.

Clearly, the odds were stacked heavily against the Redmen. And yet they refused to be intimidated. They went into the game with home field advantage and a determination to play as well as they had in another key game, their upset defeat of I.E. Weldon in the Kawartha West final.

In the end, they almost pulled it off. They held the visitors scoreless until late in the first half, when a deadly accurate pass slipped through Redmen defenders and into the hands of a Crestwood receiver to put the first six points on the board. That was one of a number of defensive lapses — including pass interference and two incidents of roughing the kicker — that enabled Crestwood to take the game out of the Redmen's reach.

Haliburton trailed 10-0 at the half but the game was still within reach. In the second half, however, Crestwood's strength on the bench, the outstanding passing of their quarterback, and their powerful running attack, simply overwhelmed the Redmen.

They were not shut out, however. Shaun Perrin put six points on the board on an option play that Ryan Timbers converted, and late in the fourth quarter Jason Morrisette snagged a pass and ran 50 yards for six more.

The final score was 35-13 in favour of Crestwood. Despite the loss and the lapses, the Redmen played well. Darren Danylyshen and Ryan Timbers put in particularly determined efforts playing both ways. And the defensive hitting was some of the hardest of the season, as Crestwood players told the Redmen at the conclusion of the game.

The Redmen wrapped up the year with a record of 4 and 2 in the regular season and the Kawartha West championship — a successful season indeed.

'Cliff-hanger' matches make up for slower paced games

THIS WEEK IN THE M.H.L.

by: CHIP TRUEMAN

THE ACTION WAS divided on Sunday night. Two of the contests were absolute cliff-hangers while the other two games were somewhat less than exciting. Let's get the bad news over with first, and save the "best for last".

Vasey Insurance left the arena with "smiles galore" as they trounced Haliburton Lumber 14-3. Bernie Upton and Kevin Phillips performed their usual magic for the brokers, but a couple of other players appeared in the spotlight as well. Carl Rowbotham netted three and Hugh Nicol picked up four points with his own hat trick and an assist. Drew Carey and Glen Fick also wobbled in a couple from the point. Vasey goalie Dave Elstone had an easy night. Only Norm Barry, Stuart Baker and Billy Whittaker found an opening. Haliburton Lumber's offence must have spent too much time on their watches last week. They were definitely asleep on Sunday.

Elstone Motors had a terrific time on the weekend as they scored six times against Bishop and Wilson. Luke Schell got two goals, as did Floyd Henry. Kim Emmerson popped one in, and so did Steve Cooper. Kevin Finch tried to fend off the attack but just couldn't stop the mighty motemen. Yours truly even got in close for a couple whacks at the puck but was interfered with and couldn't score. Final score—Elstone Motors SIX—Bishop and Wilson 14. Joe Roberts got a measley 8 goals, Tran LaRue a scant 4. Ed Davis and Bruce Cawker only scored once each. Ha! Nice try surveyors! Oh and by the way the game was Bishop and Wilson's only win so far this year compared to Elstone's whicked 1-7-0 record.

Alright enough of that bush league stuff, let's talk hockey! When Youngdale's Fuels and Roberts-

Austin Fuels get together, one can always expect things to "heat up". Get it—HEAT UP? This game was hot, and I'm not talkin' celsius here folks. Youngdale's Fuels were three minutes away from handing Roberts-Austin their second loss of the season, but Erin Nicholls stormed back with two unanswered goals, lifting his team to victory. Final score: 7-6. time of the last goal—00:26. The loss was a heartbreaker for Youngdale's as they played hard all night, with only seven skaters. Mike Rae, Glen Scully, Ken Barry, Tim Chambers and Peter Fearrey scored for Y.F. Roberts-Austin points came mainly from Erin Nicholls with four goals as well as Bob Woodcock, Chuck Clarkson and Teddy Glendinning.

If anyone had of stayed around the arena for the final match on Sunday night they would not have been disappointed. Carm, Wendy and Andrea were the only ones left when I went home, but what a game to see. Curry Motors and Emmerson Lumber battled hard to improve their positions in the standings. By game's end it was Curry Motors picking up two points and another stroke in the win column as they edged Emmersons 6-5. The lumbermen started the scoring and soon jumped into a two goal lead, but Curry's eventually pulled ahead in the second period. It proved to be a lead that they would never give up. Rob Abbs pulled E.L. to within one, late in the game, but that was all they could muster.

Chris Hodgson's hat trick and singles by Steve Barker, Andy Hodgson and Ernie Bain accounted for Curry's six. Emmerson Lumber's five were the result of Abbs' hat trick, Leroy's goal and Rick Wood's wicked wrist shot. Say that three times quickly!

And so, like a fisherman who get's a good bite or a golfer who just misses a thirty foot putt, we'll all be back next week for another "shot at first spot".

I'm Chip and that was THIS WEEK IN THE M.H.L.

Huskies win two games

In the last week the Haliburton OMHA Nicholls Novice Huskies settled into league play, winning both games they played.

On Tuesday, November 6 the Huskies travelled to Sunderland. They were flat in the first period and Sunderland took advantage of this, scoring the only goal of the period.

Early in the second period Greg Forgrave picked up a loose puck and broke out over Haliburton's blueline and down the ice with a defenseman keeping pace. Never the less Greg got his shot away, back across the net, high on the goalie's glove side to bulge the twine. Sunderland came back, regaining the lead and then taking a two goal lead. Late in the second the line of Forgrave, Mike Morissette and Mike Craigen were pressing the play in Sunderland's end. Craigen took the puck behind the net and passed to Forgrave who one-timed it into the net for his second of the evening.

In the third period the Huskies came alive sparked by Kenny Ablett. Devon Dart moved the puck up to Ablett who scrambled his way to the net and evened the score. After this the Huskies carried the play but an untimely Haliburton penalty allowed Sunderland to go back up by 1 as they scored quickly on the power play. The Huskies did not give up. Cole Glendinning carried the puck behind his net, passed it up to Ablett along the boards who quickly flipped it to the centre ice area where Craigen picked it up and skated in with Forgrave on a two man break-away. Craigen held onto the puck and smoothly deked the goalie to even the score. On the next face-off Ablett worked his magic again as he charged in and scored his second of the game and the game winner just five seconds after Craigen's goal. The Huskies then held on to the lead and withstood a Sunderland charge, with their goalie pulled in favour of an extra attacker, for a 5 to 4 win.

On Sunday, November 11 Beaverton came to town in true hockey weather, a raging snow storm. The Huskies came out flying as they remembered the beatings Beaverton had given them in last season's playoffs. Three minutes into the game Chris Nimigon charged into the corner in Beaverton's end and cleared the puck to Ablett at the hash marks. Kenny made a nice pass to Forgrave in front of the net. Greg played the puck on his back hand and flipped it past the goalie. Beaverton, a well balanced team, tied it up before the first ended.

Beaverton took two penalties in the first half of the second period but held the Huskies power play scoreless. Finally, at the mid-point of the period Ablett's hustling in the Beaverton end paid off as he passed to Forgrave who slid the puck into the net for his second of the game. This one goal lead held up until mid-way through the third period when Beaverton's Michael Hanna tied it up on a great individual effort. Less than a minute later Haliburton regained the lead. There was a fierce battle along the boards at centre ice. Bulldog Mike Morissette slipped the puck out to Ryan Wood who headmanned it up to Mike Craigen. Craigen blew by a defenseman, made a little shift on the goalie and scored easily. Beaverton promptly took a penalty and on the power play the Huskies made some good passes around the Beaverton net; Ablett to Morissette

Opposing team is trounced

The Keith Jackson Real Estate PeeWees began the week on the right foot by trouncing Beaverton 10-1. Goals were scored by Tim Keefer, Jon Hebert, Jackie Morrison, Curtis Bain and Derek Glendinning. Haliburton played cleanly, taking only two minutes in penalties while Beaverton took 15 penalty minutes. The difference in penalties was reflected in the score as Haliburton scored three power play goals.

On Saturday, Lakefield came to town for two games. The first game ended in a 2-2 tie. Haliburton held a 2-1 advantage in the dying minutes but Lakefield scored as a result of a defensive lapse with only six seconds remaining. Haliburton goal scorers were Tim Keefer and Tim Stouffer.

The second game saw Keith's boys come away with a 4-1 win. Goal scorers were Bill Dovell, Tim Keefer, Derek Glendinning and Curtis Bain. Haliburton showed superior conditioning in the second game and outskated the opposition throughout the game.

Tuned-in trout...

by LEN PIZZIE
Publisher

BEEP!... beep beep. BEEP!... beep beep. Biologist Tim Haxton strains to hear the electronic code being picked up by the hydrophone, as a cold wind turns the surface of Kennisis Lake into a sharp chop that slaps against the boat's aluminum hull. He rotates the shaft of the hydrophone slowly in his hands, allowing its cup-shaped receiver about four feet below the surface, to search for other sounds.

BEEP!... beep beep. "Number 12" says Haxton to his partner on this day's search, Dave McLeish. The number and location are noted on a chart of the lake. Haxton pulls up the hydrophone and McLeish starts the outboard. He powers the boat deeper into a bay at the west end of the lake, shuts the motor and depth finder, and hunkers down against the biting wind. Haxton submerges the hydrophone, and more faint electronic sounds are amplified from the speakers in a wooden case at his feet. To an unpractised ear the series of beeps is confusing, but in a few moments Haxton has sorted them out. They are coming from the bellies of two lake trout, each set of beeps a code that identifies an individual fish.

For several weeks the two men, and a number of other Ministry of Natural Resources fisheries technicians, have been spending long cold hours, both day and night, searching out the locations and charting the movements of 17 electronically tagged lake trout.

Their goal is to identify precisely where the trout spawn. The information will help the MNR assess the condition of the beds, improve and rehabilitate them if necessary, and protect them against the growing pressure of development.

The study began earlier in the fall, when gill nets were set at depths ranging from 50 to 100 feet. Trout caught in the nets were brought to the surface, placed in a tank of ice cold water, and later anaesthetized. Each was measured, weighed and sexed. A small incision was made in their bellies, into which an ultrasonic tag, about the size of a thumb, was inserted. The fish were then stitched up, placed in a recovery tank, and finally released back into Kennisis Lake, where, if all goes well, they will continue to send out electronic signals for the next 14 months.

Why is the MNR expending all this time, effort and expense to track the movements of 17 trout in Kennisis Lake?

Biologist Dave McLeish explains that lake trout are like the "miners' canary" — their health and ability to reproduce are a measure of a lake's health. They are known to be very sensitive to environmental stresses. Acidification from precipitation, algae growth and changes in a lake's oxygen content that stem from cottage development, threaten their viability. So, too, do physical changes to the shoreline and near shore lake bed. Crib docks, truckloads of sand, retaining walls that change the waterflow, erosion and nutrient loading that often follows cottagers' penchant for cutting down trees, can damage spawning beds and cause other changes that threaten the survival of indigenous lake trout populations.

It's a battle that the MNR has been fighting for many years, and they are trying to step it up, despite the inevitable shortages of people and resources. In the past year, for example, Minden's MNR office

The Ministry of Natural Resources uses ultrasonic devices to determine where Kennisis Lake lake trout are spawning.

ELECTRONIC TROUT: MNR biologist Dave McLeish, left, and Tim Haxton use a hydrophone to track the location of trout implanted with an ultrasonic transmitter.

Their goal is to identify spawning beds in Kennisis Lake to protect and enhance them, ensuring viability of the trout population.

perused some 570 applications for work on crown shoreline and lakebed. Over 200 of these were subjected to on-site inspection, and in more than 80 percent of the applications, Ministry officials called for changes to cushion the environmental impact of the proposed work. And these are only the plans for which approval was sought. No one knows how much work is carried out without asking for MNR permission, but it is thought to be considerable.

With 75 lake trout lakes in the Minden District, projects like the one carried out at Kennisis Lake this fall are only a small step in the ongoing struggle to protect and enhance the lake trout fishery. But Kennisis Lake is particularly challenging because of its size and depth, and because until now, the location of its prime spawning beds has not been precisely known.

Tracking the sonically tagged fish, Haxton, McLeish and their colleagues have been able to identify areas where the trout spawned this autumn. Later, they intend to use scuba gear to inspect the condition of the beds. They also hope to make use of an electronically controlled submersible video camera that has recently become available. Beds that have deteriorated due to algae growth can be cleaned using fire hoses. Rock rubble can also be added to create a better environment for spawning. And once charted and inspected, the beds can be protected from physical changes.

The biggest threat, however, is also the most difficult to control. It may be possible to influence people's attitudes and actions — to convince them, or force them — not to cut down trees, plant lawns,

Student smokers share image concern

Editor's note: The Board of Education recently suggested that the students of HHSS help it come up with a suggestion about what to do about student smokers in front of the school. The Echo has asked Jeff Stamp to tap into the students' feelings.

by JEFF STAMP

DRIVING PAST the historic locomotive in front of the high school, a car slows down, pulls off to the right hand side of the road and a family emerges — presumably a father, mother and their daughter. The little girl eagerly asks her mother if they can go look at the train. Her mother looks across the highway; concern is evident in her eyes. She is silent, then looks at the little girl and replies, "Maybe we will come back later." Her partner agrees and the little girl, disappointed, climbs back into the car.

What made this family decide not to explore the past? These parents mentioned saw the crowd of teenaged smokers gathered in front of the locomotive and decided it would be healthier and safer to come back after school hours.

One smoker, who observed the scene, says, "Unfortunately, this kind of thing happens all of the time. We feel badly about it, but we have no other choice but to smoke here."

His friend agrees, adding that "tourism is being affected because no one wants to come over here and see the train when we're here."

By saying that "they are not given any other choice," this teen is referring to the recent Board of Education ban of smoking on all school property. This means the designated smoking area behind the school could no longer be used, forcing students who smoke off onto municipal property.

The Board of Education, it seems, was acting out of concern for the health of non-smoking students, but at the same time, their decision has worsened

'We feel badly about it, but we have no other choice but to smoke here,' says a teen smoker. I'm really surprised there hasn't been an accident yet. Someone's going to get hit sooner or later.' The highschool students want to be allowed to smoke on school property again.

the problem of student safety.

Many smokers try to stay to the side of the road, but given the narrowness of the road, are still just being missed by cars and buses.

"I'm really surprised that there hasn't been an accident yet. Someone's going to get hit sooner or later," says one smoker.

The smokers are also upset about the bus drivers' letter to the Board of Education. Many students walk down the middle of the road to get to public property. "What they (bus drivers) don't realize is that only a few people walk down the middle. Most of us try to stay off of the road. The few people who do walk down the middle make the rest of us look bad," says one smoker.

There is also a concern about the coming winter, when snow banks and icy conditions will make the road even more dangerous.

"In the winter, there is no other place to walk but down the road. The sidewalk in front of the train is never ploughed and snowbanks will give us no other choice but to walk where it is clear," adds one teen.

Walking where it is free of ice and snow, unfortunately, will mean walking on the roadway, increasing the odds of a traffic accident. Another student says "Our old area by the school gave us some protection from the weather because it had a roof. We could run out for a quick smoke and run back. Now we will have to come down here for a smoke with no shelter."

When asked if they could quit smoking before the arrival of the winter, which would seem to be one solution to this problem, one smoker says, "Many of us have tried to quit, but it's hard. When you smoke, you become addicted to the nicotine. It's just like any other addiction and it's very hard to stop."

All the smokers want is to get their old area back. They were out of the way of traffic, provided with a clean, sheltered area, and still far enough away from the school that they didn't threaten the health of non-smokers with second-hand smoke. The old area was also easily supervised, something that one smoker says "can't be done down here." They started a petition to press their point.

The smokers share concerns about tourism and the images the new area gives the school.

"People see us first before they see the train at the high school. That's not what tourists are interested in, but where else are we supposed to go? If we go any farther away, we'll be late for class. We're in a no-win situation," says one student who is a non-smoker, but has many friends that do. She uses the area as well.

Non-smokers are finding it hard to see the reasoning behind the Board's new policy. They too are concerned with their safety with regards to traffic and the image of the school.

"I really don't see how they (smokers) were hurting anyone when they were in their old area. They were out of the way of traffic and never bothered anyone," says one non-smoker. Her friend adds "It also looks really bad for the school to have everyone out there. This new rule doesn't work, the old one did. I don't know why they even changed it."

The non-smokers also agree with the smokers that the new ban has tarnished the school image, hurt tourism, but most importantly, affects their safety. "Someone is going to hit someone or get hit by a car. It doesn't matter if it is a non-smoker or smoker," says one student.

The students at HHSS seem more concerned with safety than with smoking on school property. They feel the Board has a certain amount of responsibility to its students to keep them safe while they attend school. A responsibility that may feel is not being met.

If there is to be a solution to this complex problem, it appears the Board of Education will have to consult the smokers themselves to reach a compromise — which only seems just because the smokers, in the end, are the ones who are affected most.

Important Changes to Unemployment Insurance

Below are the highlights of changes to the Unemployment Insurance (UI) Act. These changes will affect most claims that start on or after November 18, 1990.

Qualifying for benefits

After November 18, you will need 10-20 weeks of work within the past year to qualify for regular UI benefits. The exact number of weeks you will need and how long you will be able to collect these benefits will depend on the unemployment rate in your area.

Maternity/Parental benefits

Parents may be eligible for 15 weeks of maternity benefits (available to the mother) plus 10 weeks of parental benefits (available to either the mother or the father).

Parental benefits are also available in the case of an adoption.

Leaving a job

Individuals who leave their job without "just cause", are fired for misconduct or refuse a suitable job offer, can be penalized by losing from 7 to 12 weeks of benefits and having the amount of benefits reduced.

Working after age 65

If you work after age 65, you may now be eligible for UI. This change will be retroactive to September 23, 1988.

Development pressure poses threat to lake trout's survival

pour concrete or create a beach where nature intended none. But the matter of human pollution is particularly intractable. Septic systems, if they are well constructed and properly maintained, do a good job of preventing fecal coliform bacteria from reaching a lake. But septic beds are less effective at handling phosphates from laundry detergents and other cleaning products. Ultimately these flow from tile beds into lakes, contributing to algae and plant growth. As the plants grow and die, they fall to the bottom of lakes, where they are consumed by bacteria. These bacteria use up oxygen that is critical to the survival of trout. Increased plant life and its decay also warms a lake up, and trout can only thrive in very cold water. Studies have shown that when 20 percent of the water in a lake is too warm or contains too little oxygen to support lake trout, the fish can no longer reproduce effectively. Large lake trout can live for many years in a lake that is deteriorating, but of they cannot reproduce, the species will eventually disappear. For that reason, spawning activity is a better gauge of a lake's health than are the mature fish that anglers may land.

Lake trout form the top layer of a lake's food chain. If they disappear, the ecosystem is irrevocably altered. Stocking with splake can replace fishing opportunities, but the fish cannot reproduce, and their numbers must be replenished from hatchery stock.

There is no certainty that the lake trout in Kenosis Lake or any of the other cold, deep lakes in Haliburton County can be saved from the consequences of human activity. But the sophisticated techniques now being employed by the MNR to chart spawning beds and assess the health of the species are helping to provide fisheries experts with the ammunition they need to battle on nature's behalf against the pressures of development.

Anglers can assist the cause by contacting the MNR if they land a fish that has a transmitter in its belly. The transmitters can be used again in future studies.

aiding and supporting the purchase," Cathcart said. She estimates a new building would cost $65 to $75 a square foot.

Council's problem is the land is dedicated as parkland. It has already sold off chunks for two present seniors apartments and a sale of 3.5

acres of land for a third seniors apartment was agreed on later that afternoon. As well, council is selling five acres of the land to the county for its new office.

"There's a question of when do we say no," said Reeve Ray Moore. "Where are we going to stop — are we going to keep chopping this up?"

Deputy-reeve Bern Berry said it was an interesting proposal yet both he and Councillor Mike Maher said CHACE should continue pursuing other alternatives as a safeguard.

A closed meeting will be held between CHACE and council on November 22 to discuss the proposal and price.

"Hey Lou, why don't you come with us?" he added. "Bobby's our driver, so you don't have to worry that way."

"You don't even need a shave," pointed out Jake's father-in-law, running a hand over his own stubbly chin. "It won't take the rest of us long to get cleaned up."

Lou thanked them but begged off. After a day of hammering and sawing, the last thing he wanted to do was go out. How on earth they were up to it after tramping the bush all day was beyond him.

"But you're coming with us for a day next year, right Lou?" asked one of them. Lou reminded them that he didn't shoot deer; just ate them. They said that was fine, he didn't have to carry a gun.

"But you really ought to experience it," said Jake. "Just being out there. You see all kinds of things in the bush. It's hard to explain. You just have to be there."

As Lou rose to leave, knowing the others still had to shave and there was only one bathroom, he patted his pocket to be sure the photo was still there. They waved him out the door and just before it closed behind him he heard Jake's voice. "Next year Lou. Remember you're coming with us."

Reform Party makes start

should suffice elsewhere.

"I think official bilingualism was never supported by the majority of Canadians and that sentiment has been exacerbated by the the Official Languages policy rather than be tempered by it."

When asked if this will only serve to re-ignite passions and re-align people along French/English terms, Devolin says there will probably be a brief time of friction. But official bilingualism "is in itself helping to create the friction."

He hopes the country will be able to move away from such issues to be able to deal with the economy and being able to compete in a global market. "I don't think Quebec really wants to leave Canada or this gut-wrenching turmoil will go on and on. Let's work out the best arrangements and get on with it. The whole world is moving towards integration and free trade and in Canada we're still talking about these things. I feel very strong ties to Quebec and it will trouble me greatly if they left, but we can't continue rolling these things around."

Devolin might not be against the French, but won't the Reform Party attract those who are?

"Preston Manning's father said 'Bright lights attract bugs.' You hope within the party there are competent, responsible people who have an influence on it."

"I don't want to be identified with kooks on the fringe. While the possibility of the Reform Party being overrun by rednecks does exist, it's been my experience that these type of people aren't involved."

And it's not bad to have another party on the political horizon, he says. The New Democrats started out as a fringe party in the West and now are part of Canadian's psyche. Many reformers in the West are former NDPers who don't like the socialist direction the party took.

"(The Reform Party's stance) of controlling government expenditures reminds people of the Conservative party but giving more voice to the grassroots they associate with the NDP. . . Even big L Liberals note that jobs and wealth are best created by private enterprise. The notion of more government is not necessarily good."

The local riding association may be small now, but it's Devolin's hope they will be able to field a candidate for the next election.

Will it be him? "That's not my objective at the present time," he says in the typical politician's manner. His main interest is in politics itself. A political science major, he was two-thirds towards earning his PhD when he returned to his hometown of Haliburton a few years ago.

In interim executive has been set up, which includes Linda Beachli, also of Haliburton, as vice-president. Rest assured, there will be more news coming from the party in the coming months.

to Forgrave into the net for a hat trick. Beaverton came back with another goal late in the game but the Huskies took the victory by a score of 4 to 3.

Not to be forgotten in these close games is the Huskies' defense consisting of Cole Glendinning, Jamie Johnston, Devon Dart and Bobby Hebert, back-stopped by goalie Brian Mulholland. These are the guys who frustrate the other teams' shooters time and time again.

and put the cost of housing beyond the reach of everyone but the very rich. I know a number of women in our community who work at back-breaking jobs for $4.50 an hour. Some of them are trying to raise children with husbands who suddenly found themselves without work.

So please don't make the terrible mistakes that defined the first great Depression. It is not the poor, the hungry, the immigrant or the unemployed who got us into this mess, but those some unscrupulous, greedy manipulators of the economy, best exemplified by the MultiNational Corporations.

Remember, for every person who is unfairly taking advantage of our social programs, there are twenty desperately trying to find a way out of the soul-destroying position that happened through no fault of their own.

Our badly organized and poorly constituted educational system has turned out graduates who, in too many cases, are functionally illiterate. Indeed, a recent poll found that an alarming number of teachers fell into that same classification. A naive, poorly educated and biased electorate is responsible for putting into power one of the worst administrations imaginable. In our southern neighbour the same uncaring, greedy power-hungry political party is producing the sad conditions that we are beginning to see here. Let's stop making thoughtless, factually incorrect and harmful statements about those who can't fight back.

Coverage appreciated

To the Editor:

HAVE members would like to express their appreciation to The Echo for its coverage of our Annual Variety Concert on November 3rd, to those who gave so generously, and to all the organizers and entertainers. We especially enjoyed the literacy skits performed and written by the J.D. Hodgson students of Sharon Harrison's class. With very limited preparation time they managed to put on a performance that was both fun and purposeful.

Clarence and Jean McInerney will be leaving for The Gambia near the end of this month. We wish them all the success in this Primary Education project. Any monies raised over and above the project cost of $32,000 will be put towards school supplies thereby extending this project to as many schools as possible. The need is great.

HAVE welcomes new members and volunteers to help with fund-raising, administration, and monitoring of projects. We are in need of an assistant secretary, and people with organizing abilities.

Contrary to previous publicity, the next H.A.V.E. meeting will be on November 22 at Gerry Feltham's house in Ingoldsby at 7:30 p.m. sharp. Everyone is welcome. For further information call 457-3684 or 286-1647.

Tour says thanks

To the Editor:

It has come to my attention that a public thank-you was overlooked with regard to all the help we received this year promoting the Haliburton County Studio Tour.

To the two local papers, Sir Sandford Fleming College, all the stores and businesses, and all the lodges and resorts who helped distribute our brochures, we would like to say a very big thank-you.

Without the help we receive from everyone the Tour would never be the success it is.

Thank you very, very much.

So the Mc Museum I visited was actually the ninth restaurant — but really the first one of the successful chain as we know it — dating from April 15, 1955. And it's been preserved just like they looked when we visited the first one we found in Michigan three years later.

Ray Kroc only made $20,000 profit the first year, but he was able to buy his partners out in 1961, for $2.71 million, and before he died he got a lot of gold out of the golden arches.

I'll probably take more kidding for visiting the McDonald's Museum than I get for eating there, but there were a lot of interesting nostalgia items of the '50s in it, and we had fun!

THE HALIBURTON COUNTY ECHO

Wednesday, November 14, 1990

SECTION 2

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

FORMER HEALTH MINISTER Elinor Caplan, in defending her decision to stall construction of the 18-bed chronic care unit at Haliburton Hospital, used to say that instead of talking about beds, we needed to talk about people — people who would rather be cared for in their homes than in institutions.

Well, Mrs. Caplan no longer holds sway at Queen's Park, but here's a story for her anyway. As she would like, it's about people — people who are a testament to what it's like when there are no chronic care beds in the county.

Since buying his new car in April, Bob Morrow has put 32,000 kilometres on the odometre. Most of that's been done driving back and forth to Peterborough Civic Hospital, his wife Betty's home for the past six months. Rain or shine, snow or sleet, three times a week he leaves his Lake Kashagawigamog home to let his wife know he's still there for her. For much of her time, he's her only lifeline to their happier days together in Haliburton.

When Mr. Morrow was asked to be interviewed about this, he hesitated. And hesitated some more. A private person, he would not normally want his life opened to the public. As well, he doesn't want sympathy, only understanding. However, for the good of everyone's hopes to have a chronic care unit built in Haliburton, he did agree to share his thoughts. Those thoughts speak as much about what life means as they do about the county's need for beds.

First, a little background on the Morrows. They've been married 47 years and have four children, two girls and two boys. In 1970, they moved to Haliburton when they bought Bolendar's white lime quarry in Eagle Lake. Seven years ago, they retired and their volunteer pursuits made them quite well-known in the community. He was a stalwart of Home Support and the Haliburton Rotary Club; she was an ever-smiling member of the Guild of Fine Arts and Cancer Society volunteer.

Last year, when they celebrated Christmas together, she was 68. There's a picture of them among a happy group of friends at New Year's, the Morrows sitting casually on the floor as if it was their university days.

After New Year's, they went visiting friends in Kingston, first dropping by Peterborough Civic Hospital to visit a dying friend. They were on their way home when the accident occurred.

"We were coming along the 401," Mr. Morrow says, just before leaving to visit his wife. "I was driving. It was foggy and raining. The car got off to the side of the road, with one wheel in the shoulder, and I couldn't get back on. Like a fool, I kept trying to get on instead of slowing down and pulling completely off to the side. After a few attempts, I did get the car back onto the highway but it fishtailed and we went into the ditch, hitting a tree."

"Betty got the worst of it — broken legs, crushed chest. I could walk out of the car. It all went downhill from there."

Mrs. Morrow was rushed to the Napanee hospital by ambulance. She stayed there for a couple of days before she was transferred to Kingston's teaching hospital. While there, she had trouble breathing and they operated.

Mr. Morrow doesn't want to talk about how or why things went wrong. Bringing it up in public won't bring his wife back, he says.

However, one thing was clear. The level of electrolytes, chemicals in the brain which control muscles, was extremely low. As a result, she's now in a semi-coma with permanent brain damage.

"She never came back out of it," says her soft-spoken husband. "She's never spoken another word, she's lost her ability to control her motions. She can see and hear but she can't talk. I don't know how much she takes in. The only thing that's keeping her going is a feeding tube into her stomach; she can breath on her own but she can't eat."

We're Still Waiting

In 1984, Haliburton County was promised 18 chronic care beds. Six years and a change of government later, those beds are still far from being built. This profile of Bob and Betty Morrow illustrates the human cost of such delays.

After two and a half months, Mrs. Morrow was transferred to Peterborough Civic, where she's been ever since. Mr. Morrow has admiration and praise for the way she's being cared for.

"They could handle her up here with two qualifications: a doctor to take care of her and a bed. I have a doctor who will take care of her but no bed."

Very often, Mr. Morrow is the only visitor his wife will see in a day. Family tries their hardest to visit as much as possible, but they have jobs and families of their own to take care of.

His visits can sometimes be lonely, and often sad. "There are times when I come and she'll endeavour to raise her forearm. She'll gently grip my hand. I'm positive she recognizes people. She'll cry if I tell her certain things. Her niece died in a car accident last winter and when I told her, she cried. Other times, she just sleeps."

"She's not comatose as I understand comas. But neurologists say there's too much brain damage and they don't know how to reverse it. Her chances of recovery are virtually nil."

Because Mrs. Morrow has no way of communicating, it's difficult to gauge how she is coping with her illness. Long before the accident, she told her husband and children she wouldn't want to be kept alive on a life support system. Doctors today can't take her word for it.

"They say they can't do anything. I think that's because they're afraid of being sued. A lot of people, if they had the choice would let things go and I'm sure Betty would. To what avail really? We treat dogs and animals better than we treat human beings."

"It's a moral problem, it's something society skirts around. People are afraid it will be abused if they give authority to take another life."

Mr. Morrow gets up from the couch and walks over to a desk, opening a drawer and taking out what's called a "living will". Drafted by the Society for the Right to Die, and signed by him and his two daughters, it says that if his chances of survival from illness or accident are dim, he does not want to be resuscitated.

Such tragedies have been known to splinter families, but Mr. Morrow steadfastly continues to make the drive to Peterborough at least three times a week. His visits can't be long, and hotels have lost their allure, but he knows he makes a difference in his wife's life.

"Why do I continue to visit her? Why would you not visit your husband or boyfriend? Although there are times she doesn't seem to know I'm there, most times she does. I think I'd want her to visit me! She's too much a part of my life, a full part of my life."

"But do you know what happens? People visit but as time goes on, they visit less and less. Elderly people are funny in a way — they don't like to see this [seniors in Mrs. Morrow's state] because they're afraid they'll be like that one day."

"Oddly enough, you find strange things happen — sometimes the people who you thought were good friends turn out to be acquaintances, and acquaintances turn out to be good friends."

"Betty, being down there in Peterborough, will be forgotten by most people. If she was up here, I would hope people would be prone to dropping in, but they might not after a while."

In dealing with his wife's illness, Mr. Morrow also notices a difference between the sexes. Women ask right away how his wife is doing; men don't mention her at all. It's not that he wants to bare his inner thoughts, but he does wish they'd acknowledge her aliveness. It's almost as if she had died in the accident.

Not being in his prime, the travelling back and forth, not to mention the emotional stress of his wife's illness, is taking its toll on Mr. Morrow — not that he'd tell anyone that.

"I have to cope with it. I have no choice," he says. "There are times I'd like to have someone to talk to, but I don't want to force myself on anyone. I read a lot, I don't watch tv except the news. (Doctor) Harry Good has been very good to me, he's gone out of his way to call on me whenever I need him."

Of course this question arises: What does Mr. Morrow think about the absolute lack of chronic care beds in Haliburton County?

(In 1984, the Liberal government approved the expansion. Permanent and seasonal residents raised $400,000 in less than a year; the county topped off the public's third of what was then estimated to be a $1.6-million cost. Early last year, Caplan announced a freeze on all new chronic care beds in the county and instituted the committee to investigate long-term health care in Haliburton County. That committee is expected to have its preliminary report soon. However, MPP Dennis Drainville and Bob Rae, when he was campaigning here this summer, have said the beds will go ahead no matter what the study says. No definite approval to begin construction has been given yet.)

"There are more and more people coming up here of an age who will need the service," says Mr. Morrow, his wife unwittingly becoming the rallying cry for the beds. "It becomes a matter of need. I think it boils down totally to need. If they can prove the need, they can provide the services."

He can't complain about the excellent care his wife is getting in Peterborough. However, her emotional health would be better taken care of if she had the stimulus of more visitors.

"Maybe I should get a place down there," he says. "I'd probably do that if I didn't have other family commitments here."

"It's a rather lonely approach."

It's unlikely Elinor Caplan cares any more, but many people would like to know if the new health minister, Evelyn Gigantes, is willing to listen to a story about people.

Program meets "special needs"

Parents find the help they need

by BRIAN RODNICK
Staff Reporter

Raising children has never been an easy task — ask any parent. It requires a great amount of patience and endless hours of special attention.

However, raising a child who has a physical, emotional or learning disability can make a parent's job even tougher. Luckily for many of these children in Haliburton County, they have parents who are willing to provide them with the help they need.

One way which parents can find this help is through the Haliburton Case Co-ordination Program. And many have.

"We have so many wonderful parents who are willing to work hard for their kids," says co-ordinator Barb Fraser.

The program is relatively small compared to most of the social service programs, with Fraser as the only full-time employee. But considering the wide assortment of duties that Case Co-ordination Program performs, the size of the program is not the issue.

The make-up of the program is simple, says Fraser. It provides support, referral, coordination and advocacy for parents of children with "special needs".

Special needs do not just constitute physical handicaps, but learning disabilities and emotional problems — all which can cause a tremendous amount of stress for both the child and parents.

By using the program's resources, parents can be put in contact with agencies that can help them cope with the situation.

"This program is the first step to finding them help."

Once the proper help has been located, Fraser will arrange for the child to have his/her special needs treated. This is usually done through some type of therapy.

This is an important fact about the program because Fraser says many people believe that she is the one who conducts this therapy. Not true. "I monitor what is going on, and make sure the kids get the help they need."

Part of Fraser's job also includes giving advice on how parents can get help which at first isn't available. "I teach parents some skills on how to advocate for help, but they will always need the various agencies to go to bat for them."

Fraser says getting the government to help set up the right programs can be very tricky. "You have to be asking for the right thing at just the right time."

Since its incorporation in 1981, the Case Co-ordination Program has assisted the Haliburton Social Action Committee in getting other services off the ground. These include the Parent Support Service, Child Abuse Prevention Workshops and Mental Health Counselling.

"This program doesn't just offer advice, it also looks at the what social service needs of the county need to be filled."

Right now Fraser says there are even more needs to be addressed. These include a parent relief program which would provide a reliable babysitting service to parents with a special needs child, and the integration of more special need kids into daycare — using the services of a specially trained resource teacher.

But for the moment, Fraser says she is happy with the direction her program has taken. "We are much different than the case co-ordination program in Peterborough," she says. "Because of our small size, we are more flexible."

The number of families which comes in for help at the program's temporary office in the Health Unit, varies every week. But on average she says at least 20 families a week come in seeking advice and the willingness of the parents to find help amazes her.

"I really admire the parents. They are willing to go that extra mile to get what they need for their kids."

The Case Co-ordination Program office is open from 8:30 to 4:30, and has an answering machine to collect messages. Fraser has a great deal of information tucked away in her filing cabinets and can answer practically any question a parent of a special needs child might have.

This is second in a series on the Haliburton Social Action Committee and its sub-committees and affiliates. Next week: Access to permanent housing.

Manning the phone is Barb Fraser, coordinator of the Case Co-ordination Program. She offers sound advice to parents who have a child with a "special need".

Agency review asks for comments

HOME SUPPORT NEWS & DROP-IN CENTRE

by Helen Henderson

Since our Brainstorming Session on October 12, our Orientation/Constitution Committee has been busy with many meetings.

From these various meetings, we have finally managed an agreement on Article I — Name and Geographic Area; Article II — Mission Statement, Goals and Objectives; Article III Membership — membership fees; Article IV — Directorate; Article V — Election; Article VI — Responsibilities of the Directorate; Article VII — Executive; also Quorum — Proxies and Election of Executive.

The successful consulting company hired by Haliburton County Home Support Services in Jamieson Research and Consulting Inc., which has already started the Agency Review as of 26th of October. Those involved with the Review include Shelley Jamieson, Jerry Organ, and Jeanette Keenan.

They expect to interview many people who are interested in Home Support such as: Ministry of Community and Social Services, community service providers, Board of Directors, Executive, paid staff members, municipal government, churches, service clubs, clients, volunteers, etc. Should anyone wish to comment on any item in the Constitution or By-laws of Haliburton County Home Support Services, please write to: Jamieson Research and Consulting Inc., 24 Whitefriars Drive, Don Mills, Ontario. M3C 2L3. Attention: Mrs. Shelly Jamieson, President. Responses will be confidential and will be received up to November 30.

In an effort to be responsive to the needs of the community, HCHSS has initiated two separate Needs Assessment studies

(most recently in 1986) and undertook a Strategic Planning Exercise which culminated in 1989 with a report detailing new initiatives for the Agency.

However, the merging provincial policy directions embodied in the Long Term Care Review process had made it timely for HCHSS to review its operations and to consider recommendations related to its future development.

Students pause to honour past

by BRIAN RODNICK

Staff Reporter

REMEMBRANCE DAY played a big role in the school day of many Haliburton students on Friday, as schools paid tribute to Canada's war heroes.

At Haliburton Highlands Secondary School, two assemblies were held, with representatives from the Haliburton Legion in attendance.

After the traditional colour party parade, and the laying of the wreath, students Stuart Mills and Karen Chatterton read their essays about the spirit of remembering.

Mills' "A Full Colour Remembrance" asked students to realize that both World Wars were not just part of a Hollywood black and white movie, but affected the lives of millions.

"How can you and I imagine what it was like when we're at least two generations and a thousand miles away from the nearest war," he asked his fellow students.

In her "Flower of Remembrance", Chatterton took a softer look at this annual tradition by explaining the significance of the poppy.

Following a performance of an original song by Dorothy Sanderson, entitled "Don't Let the Poppies Grow In Vain", Legion Secretary Jack Bassett spoke.

He talked about why Remembrance Day was an important tradition and why young people should keep it alive. "The youth of this country will have to carry on when us old guys are gone."

Bassett said he heard more students singing O Canada at this year's ceremony than in any previous years, showing, he said, a resurgence of pride in this country.

Talking to some students shows that Remembrance Day meant more than a morning off from classes.

"I don't think there should be another war," said Grade 10 student Ron Reid, referring to the possibility of war in the Persian Gulf.

"Many of those guys over there are only 18,"

Please turn to page 24

Looking at the past, Legion member Jan Shipley answers questions from Victoria Street students.

"Don't Let the Poppies Grow in Vain" was the name of the tune Dorothy Sanderson (above) sang at HHSS's annual Remembrance Day ceremony Friday afternoon. With the crisis in the Persian Gulf, this year's ceremony may have had a special meaning for some of the students. At right, Legion Secretary Jack Bassett talks to students about the importance of this special day.

To promote literacy, the Haliburton Highland Literacy Program asked students to make bookmarks which will be placed inside video tapes.

Twenty students in J. Douglas Hodgson's enrichment program each designed a bookmark after a visit by Barb Nangle of the Literacy Program.

Nangle talked to the children about illiteracy in the county and showed video tape. "My kids responded and wanted to know how they could help," says their teacher, Sharon Harrison.

The children decided to design bookmarks with Help To Read written on the side and a phone number people could call to get help.

"We tried not to have too much reading on the bookmarks," says Nangle. By placing the markers inside video tapes, the children felt more people would get the message: if a person can't read, they would watch more television.

Nangle chose two bookmarks to reproduce, one designed by Grade 8 student Sarah Levis and the other one, which was done on a computer, by Grade 8 students Michael Hartwick and Bill Koz.

Two local video dealers, Larry's Video in Minden and Radio Shack (Halco) in Haliburton, have agreed to carry the markers in their tapes. Nangle says she will be contacting more video dealers in the near future.

MARKING YOUR PLACE: These students are the proud creators of two bookmarks which will be placed inside video cassette boxes by the Haliburton Highlands Literacy Program. From left: Michael Hartwick, local program co-ordinator Barbara Nangle, and Sarah Levis. They are in Sharon Harrison's enrichment class.

Quizters ready for all comers

IS KNOWLEDGE THE KEY to happiness? Four students at J. Douglas Hodgson Elementary are getting the chance to find out when they compete on CHEX TV's Campus Quiz.

The students, Sarah Levis, Todd Hoare, Daniel Selbie, and Nicholas Fawcett have been busy quizzing themselves for the last month in preparation of their coming matches.

Thirty-two teams from six counties will compete against each other for the $2000 prize, which includes a set of encyclopedias. A previous JDHES team won a set a few years back, which they donated to the school's library. This team's ready to try again.

Their coach, teacher Roy Hoare, says his team has been practicing general knowledge questions for at least 15 or 30 minutes a day. The students will be asked questions covering a wide variety of topics, including spelling and math.

If they should win, they will play five matches between now and June.

The students say they are not nervous about their TV appearance and are anxious to face off against one of their toughest competitors, Peterborough's Saint Alphonse.

However, one possible problem could arise. "We are awaiting to see if Todd shows any signs of getting sick. His sister just had the chickenpox," says Mr. Hoare.

Luckily Todd is still 100 per cent healthy. But just as a precaution, the team's spare player, Nicholas Fawcett, has been gearing up.

The team's first match is against Bancroft Elementary, and is being taped today at CHEX's Peterborough studio. The show airs this Saturday at 12:30 pm.

Where oh where have the gingerbreads gone?

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

LOST: 70 GINGERBREAD MEN, some with spiky hair. Last seen cooling off in the Victoria Street School oven, although they have been sighted near the Canada geese and SkySlider. Greatly missed by 70 Grade 1 students. The cookies don't really have a sentimental value, but there is the appetizing reward of being able to eat them once found.

Oh where, oh where can their gingerbread men be? Can you help the students find them?
The adventure started last Tuesday. The students had just read a book about some gingerbread men who ran away from the oven, and this made them hungry. So teachers Wilma Powers, Chris Lynd and Toos Reid helped them make a big batch of cookies. They were too hot to eat that day but on Wednesday, the students lined up to get their treat. But — da, dada, da, daaaaa — they were gone!

All the students could find was a note which read: "Look, look as hard as you can. You can't find us, we're the gingerbread men!" Hey, they used almost the same words as the gingerbread men in the story! (There were a few other coincidences: The search takes place at the same time their studies include a section on learning about their community. They're making posters outlining their plight, just when they're learning about how to communicate with others.)

The search was on. After receiving postcards — one from a man feeding the geese in the park, one from a hunter who saw 40 gingerbread men staring at a moose, and one from a lady who lives on Skyline Park Road — the students followed these clues to no avail.

What do you do in a situation like this? You get help. The students phoned Const. Mike Maybee of the OPP and he told them what the police would do. They called the newspaper office. Many people read the newspaper and if there was a story about the lost gingerbread men, maybe someone could help them. The students will tour the newspaper on Wednesday to see how a newspaper is made.

One boy even set up a trap in his bedroom: He tied a string around a paper bag and put it by his door. When the gingerbread men grab the string, the bag will fall on them.

Another boy put up a poster of Bart Simpson's family, because everyone knows gingerbread men like watching The Simpsons on television.

When asked why they were looking so hard for the cookies, a little girl said "It felt miserable to all of us (when the gingerbread men left) because it really hurt our feelings. We put in a lot of time to make them."

And where do students think the tiny men are hiding? "In the bake shop. . . In the doughnut shop because gingerbread likes doughnuts. . . I think they went to the baseball field to play baseball (uproarious laughter)."

And what will the children do when they find the missing gingerbread men?
EAT THEM!!!

THE OVEN WAS BARE: When Victoria Street School Grade 1 students went to take their gingerbread men out of the oven, they weren't there. Alexandra Crighton, Matthew Gerry and Jeffrey Wilson are baffled and are joining their classmates on a search of Haliburton to find the missing cookies. Can you help them?

'Tomorrow Box' set to open for two weekends

Highlands Little Theatre members are now well into rehearsals for their fall production of Anne Chislett's "The Tomorrow Box".

This light-hearted but poignant drama explores the tensions that arise in a typical rural Ontario family. The father (played by Lloyd Johnson) sells the farm, the house and all its contents to his son (Doug Brohm) without even mentioning it to his wife (Irene Lubowitz) and announces that he is taking her to Florida to retire.

Understandably, this creates a lot of stress, especially when the daughter-in-law (Shelley van Nood) and her lawyer sister (Kim Coulter) become involved. The strained relationships between both the generations and the sexes are often comically portrayed but always possess the "ring of truth" that we can all identify with.

"The Tomorrow Box" (directed by Glen Carter, and produced by Heather Scully) is coming to H.H.S.S. November 30, December 1, 7 and 8. Emerson Lumber Ltd. is very pleased to sponsor this entertaining presentation.

Tickets available at Paulette's, Haliburton or The Storeroom, Minden. Since reserve seating was so successful in the past production, once again 50 of our best seats will be made available each night by contacting Anne Creelman at 457-2025 for reserved seating only.

'This is for real,' students say as the Legionnaires march into the auditorium said one 17-year-old student. This year's service seemed more important because of this possibility. "Who knows what will happen by this time next year?"

But for the young Victoria Street School students who experienced their first Remembrance Day ceremony, the emphasis was more on pomp and circumstance as they watched Legion members march up the auditorium aisle.

The students waited patiently for Legion members who were detained a half-hour at HHSS after they were caught in an unexpected fire drill — someone pulled the fire alarm.

When they did arrive and walked through the door, all eyes turned on them.

"Those guys were in the war, this is for real," said one excited youngster.

Once again Jack Bassett spoke to the students. Following his talk, comrades circulated around the hall answering the students' many questions.

Branch 129 President Mabel Brannigan was surprised and delighted by some of the children's inquiries. "They asked me how many men died in both wars, and how come the men have more medals."

As part of their thank you to the Legion, the children sang a song under the direction of Bill Glendon. The author is unknown:

Soldiers and sailors and airmen too.

Fought for us across the sea.

Brave and unselfish, strong and true,

Keeping Canada free!

I'll wear a poppy on Remembrance Day.

To show I'm proud of what they did for me.

"God bless my country" is the prayer I pray,

"God keep Canada free".

Afterwards, students were invited to take a tour of the Legion's war memorabilia collection.

"Look at that torpedo," squealed one youngster.

"So that is what a real sword looks like," said another as they pressed their faces and hands against the glass cabinets to get a better look.

When it came time to leave, reluctantly the students followed their teachers out of the hall.

In his speech to the students, Bassett said "we hope you will grow up to be proud of this country as we are" — and by the way some of the youngsters saluted the colour party as they marched down the aisle, they already are.

Legion's memorabilia display case catches the eye of VSS student

NOTICE OF APPLICATION TO THE ONTARIO MUNICIPAL BOARD BY THE CORPORATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF CARDIFF FOR AN ORDER OF DIVISION INTO WARDS

TAKE NOTICE That the Corporation of THE TOWNSHIP OF CARDIFF has applied to the Ontario Municipal Board pursuant to the provisions of Section 13 of the Municipal Act for an order to.....

DIVIDE TOWNSHIP INTO WARDS

Any person interested may, within twenty-one (21) days after date of this notice send by registered mail or deliver to the Clerk of Township of Cardiff notice of his or her objection to the approval of said application together with a statement of the grounds of such objection and that if a hearing is held her or his agent will attend such hearing to support such objection.

THE ONTARIO MUNICIPAL BOARD may approve of the said application but before doing so it may appoint a time and place when any objection to the application will be considered. Notice of any hearing that may be held will be given only to persons who have filed an objection and who have left with or delivered to the undersigned Clerk the address to which notice of hearing is to be sent. If no objections are received, the Ontario Municipal Board may proceed to alter or fix the boundaries in accordance with the application without holding a hearing and no further notice will be provided.

Take Notice that tenders are invited for the purchase of the land described below and will be received until 3:00 p.m., local time, on Friday, November 30th, 1990, at the Township of Sherborne et al Municipal Office, located off of Highway No. 35, Main Street, Dorset, Ontario, P0A 1E0. The tenders will then be opened in public on the same day at the Township of Sherborne et al Municipal Office.

Description of Land	Minimum Tender Amount
Part of Lot 9, Concession 1, Plan 19R-1018, Part 9, Township of Livingstone, Kawagama Lake	$5,497.65

Tenders must be submitted in the prescribed form and must be accompanied by a deposit in the form of a money order or of a bank draft or cheque certified by a bank, trust company or Province of Ontario Savings Office payable to the Township of Sherborne et al representing at least 20 per cent of the tender amount.

The municipality makes no representation regarding the title to, or any other matters relating to, the land to be sold. Responsibility for ascertaining these matters rests with the potential purchasers.

This sale is governed by the Municipal Tax Sales Act, 1984, being chapter 48 of the Statutes of Ontario, 1984, and the Municipal Tax Sales Rules made under that Act. The successful purchaser will be required to pay the amount tendered plus accumulated taxes and the relevant land transfer tax.

SNOW REMOVAL

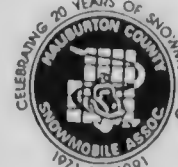

The Highway Traffic Act RSO 1980, C198 - S147, Revised 1982 states "No person shall park or stand a vehicle on a highway to interfere with the clearing of snow". A constable may have the vehicle removed from the roadway and stored at the owner's expense.

Section 157 states "No person shall deposit snow or ice on a roadway without permission in writing from the road authority responsible for maintenance of the road". The penalty on conviction is a fine of not more than $50.00.

The co-operation of all motorists in these matters would be appreciated for efficient winter maintenance of County Roads and safety of others.

COMMUNITY NEWS

A tribute to a very fine man

by LEOPOLDINA DOBRZENSKY

ELGIN STOUTER

RECENTLY The Echo published several articles on forestry practices and the tourist industry. These areas of concern to Haliburton County were always uppermost in the mind of Elgin Stouffer, a far-seeing, community-minded citizen of the Highlands, who lost a two-year long battle with cancer on October 4th.

Some of the solutions to local problems which he proposed in an almost visionary way were implemented by local councils and should be expanded further. One is the Timber-cutting bylaw adopted by Dysart Council to replace clear-cutting with selective cutting for the benefit of our forests and the protection of tourism.

On a visit to Myrtle Beach, Elgin was surprised by the large number of tourists present. He immediately inquired at the local Chamber of Commerce as to the methods used to attract them. He was told that effective advertising, especially daily weather and coming events reports, were largely responsible for the influx of visitors to the area.

As soon as he returned home, Elgin Stouffer started a similar service here, which he offered to the public, free of charge, and at some personal sacrifice, for several years. Other projects he was involved in were the development of cross-country skiing, the expansion of Stanhope airport and the re-instatement by the CRTC of CFMX-FM a classical music station whose signal reaches this area.

Elgin Stouffer was born in Stouffville, Ontario. This town was named after his family, originally from Switzerland, who immigrated there from the U.S.A. in 1805. Elgin's early childhood was spent in Weston, where his father Archie taught science at Weston Collegiate.

In 1939, Archie Stouffer was appointed inspector of schools for Haliburton and parts of Muskoka, prompting the family to settle in Minden.

In 1959, Elgin Stouffer started his own lumber business which was destroyed by fire in 1984. Mr. Stouffer was a member of Stanhope Council for some time and deputy reeve for four years. He always took a special interest in the local Chamber of Commerce and was named life member in 1989 and Highlander of the Year. Elgin Stouffer served for 22 years as a director, and for two years as president, of the Forest Products Accident Prevention Association of Ontario. This organization works with 3,000 member firms throughout Ontario.

Until he became ill, Elgin was the County's representative to the Central Ontario Travel Association. Always keenly interested in education, he served on the board of Governors of Sir Sandford Fleming College for six years.

In 1982, Elgin Stouffer went to Dominica as a consultant to set-up a logging and sawmilling complex after a hurricane devastated the island. Four years later, we find Elgin in Peru, as a consultant for another lumber enterprise, just starting up on the upper Amazon. In 1987, he returned to Peru to provide technical advice for a veneer slicing operation in Pucallpa.

Mr. Stouffer was also active in the Minden and Carnarvon United Churches, serving as elder and Sunday School superintendent. He is survived by his wife Marilyn, sons Kenneth and Richard, four grandchildren, his mother, two sisters and a brother.

Elgin Stouffer gave a lot to his community.

Management Committee — Adele Barnes, President, Helen Henderson, Board of Directors representative, Donna Pacey, Executive Director, Hadden Gillespie, Community and Social Services Representative has been formed to hire a consulting firm which can assist HCHSS as it prepares for the pressures of service demands and organizational growth.

The Terms of Reference for the Review are as follows:

1. Develop a profile of the agency and its services.

2. Compare HCHSS against generally accepted principles of management or some other standard of comparator to determine how the agency is functioning.

3. Make recommendations on the future development of the agency.

4. Assist the agency with developing a strategic planning process.

The outcome will be a written report which details the agency profile, reviews the functioning of the agency and provides a summary analysis and recommendations on a marketing strategy, evaluation process, personnel policies, quality assurance process and constitutional changes among other considerations. The report will also develop an organizational approach or structure to promote the development of a strategic process. Should anyone wish to comment on any items of Haliburton County Home Support Service please write to: Jamieson Research and Consulting Inc., at the address mentioned previously.

Responses will be confidential and will be received up to November 30, 1990.

Seniors hooked on tea party

SENIOR LEAGUE

by: WINNIFRED BARNUM

Hello folks. Most of this week has been beautiful, sunny during the day but cold at night.

As usual we began the week by having a tea party. The ladies of the rug hooking class from Haliburton area served the residents a delicious tea. The ladies were Marge Fedorchuk, May Bradbury, Peggy Barklay, Isabella Thomas and Elinor Hamilton, who entertained us by playing the piano during our tea party. We certainly enjoyed both the tea party lunch, and the music. Grace Coburn sang a familiar Hymn that was beautiful. Thanks to both ladies, we surely enjoyed their music. Thank you also to the other ladies who served the lunch.

It was Elinor Hamilton's home we went to on our first ride in the new bus. She has a beautiful home, and we had a lovely time, and lunch.

In the evening, Marg Prentice called our bingo. We had an enjoyable evening and thank her sincerely.

Happy Hour was held Friday afternoon. The program was by Gordon Kidd. He sang and played the guitar with Doris at the piano. Near the final part of Happy Hour Isobel Keefer helped by singing a few songs with Gordon. It was really good. Gordon had to leave a little early so Doris and the volunteers finished up by singing some old songs. The volunteers were Mary Guillem, Bonnie Fullan, Ellen Holden, and Don Holden looking after the bar.

I'm sorry to write that Lydia McNeil has been in Minden Hospital for a few days. I believe she came home yesterday.

Saturday members of the Minden Legion came to Hyland Crest and gave each of us a poppy for Memorial Day. We appreciate this very much.

Sunday night chapel service was led by Rev. John Burgess, and Alice Jones was there to play the organ. Thanks to you both. It's rather difficult for one without the other.

Monday we had kept fit in the morning and Residents council in the afternoon in the auditorium. Reports were given by each of the executives. Pheta Jones, administrator, reported on what has been done and is going to be done here at Hyland Crest. She also listened and dealt with a couple of complaints from residents. Then Doris Robertson gave her report on what she has planned for us during November and we decided what we were going to do before Christmas.

Monday evening Ena and York Marion showed the movies for us. "Portugal" showed buildings that had been built centuries ago and are still very beautiful. The second one was "Peterborough Zoo" and short ones on "The deer" and "Gennet Island" near Perce Rock. We enjoyed them very much.

In the afternoon we had a demonstration of Avon products.

Tuesday Chapel service was conducted by Doris since a Pastor wasn't scheduled.

Those who attend the half hour of reading were happy to have Doris continue reading a book by Daniel Steele.

Since Everett Fearrey was sick there was no music Tuesday night.

Attention Readers: Comfort Clothing will be here Nov. 29/90 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Family and friends are encouraged to come and help residents choose their fall and winter clothing.

All Volunteers: There will be an Appreciation Tea served on Wed. Nov. 28/90 2:30 to 4:30 p.m. We will be looking forward to seeing you there.

Pastor Murray was here Wednesday night for a service in the main lounge, and his wife came to sing. The residents thank them very much.

Yesterday Tuesday and Wednesday Linda Fry came to see some of the residents. She is occupying herself by painting pictures on sweat shirts, and she does a good job of it. We were glad to see you Linda.

They're here! Books chronicle school life

STUDENT LIFE AT HHSS

by: ERIN LYNCH

"WHY DID the chicken cross the hall? No, not to get to the other side, but to get 89/90 yearbook."

Last Wednesday many students heard this announcement which signified the yearbooks arrival. At lunch hour, students who pre-ordered their books were able to pick them up. The yearbook staff got everything set up in the art room 15 minutes before books were to be distributed. Even then people were waiting at the door. When everyone was set up at their table, the door was opened and people rushed in. The yearbook staff tried to keep things in a relatively organized fashion!

Students are always so eager to see the new yearbook. They want to see how often their face appears in it, how appealing or displeasing the picture may be. Maybe they want to check out that special someone who they have had a crush on since Grade 9, this year the yearbooks were good, thanks to Allison Sisson, last year's editor! Unfortunately, people are also eager to criticize a yearbook. How this or that is wrong, how a name is mixed up. People don't realize how much work is involved in being an editor. It takes a lot of time and organization. Some mistakes are made by the yearbook company. They mix things up and don't realize it. How are they suppose to know that Mike Vuksic is really John Vuksic? If people have all these complaints about the yearbook, maybe they should join the yearbook staff and try to make some changes instead of just complaining!

Last Wednesday the Sunship Earth counsellors were invited to a banquet at Camp Wanakita. Nearly everyone attended. It was the leaders' way of saying thanks and gave everyone an opportunity to reminisce about the funny things that had happened. Everyone enjoyed a delicious meal and some entertainment as well. It was great to see Mr. Mowat play the dating game to find out who his ideal mate was. It was fun for everyone and we can all look forward to another year of being a Sunship Earth counsellor.

Last Friday was our Remembrance Day assembly. It was especially good this year. I know I should probably sway it is good every year, but sometimes it can be quite boring. The whole reason and point of the assembly is lost! There were a few interruptions and minor interferences — like the fire alarm going off right in the middle of the one minute of silence! This threw everyone off guard and confused the colour party. I think what touched everyone's hearts was Dorothy Sanderson's own creation of "Don't Let the Poppies Grow in Vain". I think it brought a few tears to some people's eyes!

CARNARVON NEWS

by: ANN McKAY

Mrs. Bertha Parker of Scarborough has been spending the past couple of weeks with her sister, Hazel, and Jack Gregory ed the business portion of the meeting.

On Saturday Nov. 10th Jennie Tomlinson was united in marriage to Jeff Rogers of Beaverton at Zion United Church which was beautifully decorated as was the C.E. Building where the reception was held. Most unfortunate was the bride's father, Warner Tomlinson, was taken to hospital that same day after a suspected heart attack. We send him best wishes and hope he will be soon home with his family.

Mr. and Mrs. Smith (nee Judy Toye) of Collingwood spent the weekend with her parents Fred and Ella Toye.

Mr. and Mrs. Greg Moore of St. Catharines spent a few days with relatives and were accompanied back home with his mother, Mrs. Bill McKay.

Following the Church Service on Sunday morning November 25th there will be a Pancake Breakfast served in the C.E. Building. All are welcome.

The weekend saw many stranded motorists after a rash of mishaps mostly caused by cars running off the road. The new stretch of Hwy. 118 through the village should be used with caution. Two cars went off there on Sunday.

The Canadian Children's Foundation's Helpline for children and youth began operation in June of 1989.

A toll free-line provides professional guidance to troubled children across the country in a friendly, anonymous manner by way of a free telephone call. The service is available 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

The Helpline is aimed at being available to children who want or need someone to talk to; letting children know someone cares; helping to alleviate stress by talking about it; answering questions children can't ask elsewhere; providing an opportunity for earlier detection of a problem; helping and counselling children who are in a difficult situation and referring children to more help.

Children who need help may call free of charge using a toll-free number 1-800-668-6868.

If you would like further information about the service, contact your nearest Information Centre located in Haliburton and Minden. To phone, call 457-2733 Monday-Friday or 286-4100 Monday and Tuesday.

Book Fair will be a time for entire family

DORSET NEWS
by: PHYLLIS BRISCOE

Lots of November birthdays and we wish them all a happy one. On November 11th, Remembrance Day, we have Anna Ross, who will be 7 years; Isobel Palmer, Dwight, Ellen Baturensky, Bracebridge and Velde Harrison of Camarvon also all celebrate on the 11th. Marcella McKay will be partying on the 12th Greetings to each and all. After having spent the summer months at their cottage in Dorset, Stan and Shirley Cowal are returning to Naples, Fla, where they spend their winters. Shirley is a native daughter, having been born and raised in Dorset.

The Dorset Elementary School will be holding a "Great Canadian Book Fair" on Nov. 20, 21, 22 and 23rd. It will be from 10:00 to 11:30 a.m. except for the 23rd which will also be open from 3:30 to 4:30. During your visit to the Fair you will have the opportunity to purchase books that will help develop basic skills that lead to personal enrichment. Book Fairs are fun and exciting events for parents as well as students. You are invited to participate in the enjoyment so plan to attend. Make it a family affair so all can enjoy. This is the first afternoon meeting of the Dorset Senior Club and will begin at 1:30. The meetings will continue at this time during the winter months. To-day, Nov. 7th there will be a Penny Sale. Next week, Wed. 14th there will be Bingo.

Eleanor Cooper writes of West Guilford happenings

Not much news this week I'm afraid, because I'm off to Toronto for a Beth—visit and to attend the monthly A.C.W. Board meeting on Wednesday. At this meeting I represent the Victoria-Haliburton deanery of the Trent-Durham area under area vice-president Barbara Hodgson. On Nov. 25 I am to address some remarks concerning Anglican Church Women to St. Andrew's and St. George's congregations at the regular services. This is either a warning or an invitation! Marie Cooper of Woodstock has been with Elva Cooper for the two weeks of hunting season. On the last Saturday of hunting season there is a celebration dinner to mark the 100th anniversary of the Cooper Camp. There will be a memorial service for Mrs. Blanche Linton at St. Andrew's Church on November 18 at 4 p.m., which is now the regular church time for our services. There will be a time for visiting and remembering our friend after the service, as well we will serve refreshments for everyone present.

Fundamental #1:

"COULD YOU SELL YOUR OWN HOME?"

Of course you could! But, whether you should or would even want to will depend largely on your answers to these questions.

1 Do you have sufficient knowledge of current (and ever-changing) market conditions to price your home property, to put it on the market at a price that will be attractive both to yourself and prospective buyers?

2 Do you have the skills to advertise and market your property effectively? Do you know how much advertising costs?

3 Do you have a network of contacts who can produce potential buyers for your listing?

4 Are you a good negotiator? Will you be unnerved by aggressive buyers looking for bargains?

5 Do you have time to show your home to prospects? They'll want to look around when it's convenient to them, not necessarily to you.

6 Even if you have the time, can you deal objectively with negative comments some prospects may make about your home? Not everyone will share your taste in decor or appreciate your improvements.

7 Can you determine who among prospects is serious and has the necessary assets to buy as opposed to someone who is merely making frivolous enquiries? You could be stuck with a buyer who can't get mortgage financing when the deal is made.

8 And speaking of mortgages, are you able to help a prospect arrange the necessary financing?

9 Are you conversant with the many laws and regulations that affect property ownership? You could find yourself in some difficulty with a buyer to whom you've not disclosed certain facts because you didn't know about them.

Most people feel they have neither the time nor the skills to undertake the sale of a home. They prefer to rely on REALTORS — licensed or registered real estate specialists who are members of their local real estate board.

REALTORS can answer 'yes' to all the above questions. REALTOR services make the transfer of property from one owner to another as painless as possible for all concerned. REALTORS can put an army of salespeople to work selling your home through the Multiple Listing Service (MLS) but you deal with only one person — the REALTOR you select. And, you'll pay that REALTOR not one cent unless or until your house is sold, no matter how long it stays on the market.

REALTORS subscribe to a strict Code of Ethics. They work in the communities where they live. The most successful among them do well because they generate repeat business from satisfied clients.

Want to sell your home? Contact your local REALTOR.

... that can make a REAL difference!

COMMUNITY NEWS

Winter driving: Don't be fooled by roads

WINTER PLACES EXTRA DEMANDS on everyone who drives. It's the time of year when our apprehension is heightened in anticipation of snow and ice on roads and highways. And it's a good time to practice the three "Cs" of winter driving: courtesy, caution and common sense.

Unexpected changes in road and weather conditions can make things difficult for even the most expert of drivers. One of the most frightening situations is suddenly losing all contact with the road due to slippery conditions.

BEWARE OF BLACK ICE

During the winter months, the road will usually be grey-white in colour when weather conditions are dry and clear. However, sometimes it may appear to be black, causing you to think that it's just damp or wet. But be careful. It may be covered by a very thin layer of ice called "black ice."

Extremely slippery to drive on, black ice is transparent, caused by condensation or liquid moisture freezing on contact with a cold road surface. This happens when there is a quick change in air and ground temperatures, usually in the early morning hours in late fall and early spring.

In contrast, regular ice is reflective and lighter in colour. It forms when accumulated snow melts from tire action and subsequently freezes on contact with the cold air.

LET CONDITIONS BE GUIDE

Whether it's ice, snow or slush, winter driving calls for extra care. They key is to drive according to road conditions, even if it means you're going less than the posted speed limit.

You should also increase distance between your vehicle and other motorists. It takes three to 12 times more distance to stop on snow and ice.

If you car begins to skid or loses its grip on the road, try to maintain smooth, precise steering. Take your foot off the accelerator, gear down or shift to neutral and apply gradual pressure to the brakes. Steer in the direction of the skid.

Look in the direction you want your car to go. As the car responds, straighten out the front wheels. Don't jam on the brakes, because it will send you into a spin. As long as the brakes are locked, you have no control of your car.

DO NOT PUMP BRAKES

When you have to stop on a slippery road, do not pump the brakes. Instead, put the car in neutral and apply gentle pressure slowly and steadily.

In general, as you take to the road this winter, avoid abrupt acceleration, braking or lane changes that can result in your losing control on slippery roads.

* Read the road by looking ahead as far as possible. Keep your distance — at least three to four car lengths behind the car in front of you.

* Turn on your headlights in bad weather conditions. Better yet, keep them on at all times to make your vehicle more visible to other motorists.

* Don't rush. Allow extra time to drive wherever you may be going. Listen to the weather forecasts. If the weather is bad, stay home.

* Finally, slow down. Adjust your speed to suit road and weather conditions.

ALLOW YOURSELF TIME

Before you head out onto the roads this winter, prepare not only your car, but yourself. Accept the fact you will have to allow for more time — both to get ready and to reach your destination. Don't be rushed.

A "winterized" car will help ease your mind. Take time to ensure that key areas of your vehicle have been maintained. Proper tuning for your vehicle is important.

Check your radiator's antifreeze, oil, brake and transmission fluid levels. Make sure you have plenty of windshield washer fluid and gas-line antifreeze.

Try to keep the gas tank at least half-full in cold weather to minimize condensation and gas-line freeze-up. Adding gas-line antifreeze to the tank is also a good idea.

EXPECT THE UNEXPECTED

Having plenty of gas in your tank is good protection against the unexpected, especially if you travel long distances. For instance if you should get stuck in a ditch or snowbank, you'll need enough fuel to keep you warm until help arrives.

If this happens to you, stay with your vehicle. Remember to open the window an inch or two and make sure the exhaust pipe is clear of snow to avoid carbon monoxide buildup.

At all times, make sure your lights and signals are working, front and rear, so that you can see and be seen. Check the heating and defrosting systems.

CHECK YOUR TIRES

Use snow tires if the car is not equipped with all-season radial tires. Check the tread and replace worn tires with new ones, remembering not to mix treads or styles.

Don't forget to have an ice scraper and brush, shovel, booster cables, flares, chain or rope and a traction aid such as a bag of sand or kitty litter in your car. It is also a good idea to prepare an emergency kit containing blankets, first-aid kit, flashlight, candle and matches, extra clothing, boots, non-perishable food items like chocolate bars, granola and boxed juice.

LEARNING TO ADAPT: Winter's here and new driving habits must come along with it. There are things drivers can do to ensure they arrive at their destination safely, says the provincial Ministry of Transportation.

PERSONAL

HALIBURTON FAMILY VIOLENCE MENS GROUP
For men who physically abuse their partners. In Haliburton, there is a group counselling program to assist men, at no cost to them, in dealing with behaviours that physically, mentally or emotionally hurt the ones they love. This is a confidential service that does not judge or condemn, but helps you and those around you live a less troubled life. For information, referral and support leave a message at 457-1088.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of Joyce, a dear daughter & sister who passed away Nov. 7, 1989. Softly the leaves of memory fall,
Gently we gather and treasure them all
Some may forget now that you're gone,
We'll remember no matter how long.
Sadly missed by Dad, brothers and sisters.
32-P-14

WALTER BESSIE — In loving memory of a dear father and grandfather who passed away November 17, 1989. Fond are the ties that are broken.
Dear is the one that is gone,
In memory we shall keep him
As long as the years roll on.
As we loved him, so we miss him,
In our memory he is dear
Loved, remembered, longed for always,
Bringing many a silent tear.
"In silence we remember."
Sadly missed and remembered by Jack, Steve, Lynda, Dorene & families.
32-CA-14

COUMBS — In loving memory of a dear son Lyle who passed away suddenly Nov. 18th, 1974.
He is gone but not forgotten
And as dawn another year
In my lonely hours of thinking
Thoughts of him are ever near
Days of sadness still come over me
Tears in silence often flow
For the one I loved so dearly
And lost so long ago.
Sadly missed, Mom.
32-P-14

PRIPP, PENNY — In loving memory of a dear friend who passed away November 14, 1980.
There will always be a heartache,
And often a silent tear,
But always precious memories.
Of the days when you were here.
I hold you close within my heart,
And there you will remain,
To walk with me throughout my life,
Until we meet again.
Sadly missed, by Cathy.
32-NC-14

PRIPP, PENNY — In loving memory of our dear sister who died suddenly Nov. 14, 1980.
We who love you, sadly miss you
As it dawns another year.
In our lonely hours of thinking
Thoughts of you are ever near.
Forever missed by brother Jack, sister-in-law Sandra and Tony & Sherry.
32-P-14

IN MEMORIAM

PRIPP, PENNY — In loving memory of our dear daughter who passed away suddenly Nov. 14, 1980.
This Month comes with sad regret
It brings back a day we can't forget
You passed away without goodbye
But memories of you will never die.
Sadly missed ever loved by Mom & Dad.
32-P-14

BESSIE — In memory of a dear husband WALTER BESSIE, who passed away Nov. 17/1989.
Calm and peaceful he is sleeping;
Sweetest rest that follows pain;
We who loved him sadly miss him,
But trust in God to meet again.
Sadly missed by wife, Margaret.
32-P-14

FRY — In loving memory of my beloved daughter and dearly loved Aunt, JOY EILEEN FRY, who left us to be with our Saviour Nov. 16, 1979 age 46 years.
We feel so sad when those we love
Are called to live in "The Home Above"
But they have but gone to prepare the way
And we'll meet them again some happy day
For God has told us that nothing can sever
A life He created to live on forever
So let God's promise soften our sorrow
And give us new strength for a brighter tomorrow.
Forever missed and dearly loved by her mother Lillian Fry and sisters Myrna and Sheila, nieces and nephews.
32-P-14

ALGER — In loving memory of KENNETH G.W. Nov. 16/89
One year ago to-day
We had to let you go away
Your work on earth was done
And God wanted back his son.
But oh it's hard to be Still here and minus thee
Each day you're thought of
In a million ways
And one of these days
We'll be to-gether again
And it will stop the pain.
Ever loved and remembered by wife Joan & family.
